SEC. 301. None of the funds appropriated by this title for grants-in-aid of State agencies to cover, in whole or in part, the costs of operation of said agencies, including the salaries and expenses of officers and employees of said agencies, shall be withheld from the said agencies of any State which have established by legislative enactment and have in operation a merit system and classification and compensation plan covering the selection, tenure in office, and compensation of their employees, because of any disapproval of their personnel or the manner of their selection by the agencies of the said States, or the rates of pay of said officers or employees.

SEC. 302. Funds appropriated in this Act to the American Printing House for the Blind, Howard University, the National Technical Institute for the Deaf, and Gallaudet University shall be subject to financial and program audit by the Secretary of Education and the Secretary may withhold all or any portion of these appropriations if he determines that an institution has not cooperated fully in the conduct of such audits.

Note.—Excludes $2,362,000 thousand in budget authority in 1991 for activities transferred to Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Activities. Comparable amounts for 1989 ($1,348,200 thousand) and 1990 ($1,926,331 thousand) are included above.

Weapons activities.—This program provides for the research, development, engineering, testing, and production of all U.S. nuclear weapons; maintenance of these weapons for their stockpile life, and retirement and disposal of nuclear weapons from the stockpile. In 1991 the weapons program will continue to provide new technology to maintain a modern nuclear force, along with the design and development of new weapon systems in response to defense requirements. This program also provides for the certification of safety, reliability, and performance of new weapon systems and surveillance of the existing stockpile. Funding is provided for continued production of weapon systems and for stockpile improvements consistent with the Presidential Nuclear Weapons Stockpile Memorandum. In addition, this program provides for facility construction, maintenance, and restoration for the weapons research and development, testing, and production activities.

Verification and control technology.—This program supports the development and execution of U.S. national security and foreign policy in the areas of treaty verification, intelligence, and arms control. The program consists primarily of detection technology, analytical support, and intelligence. Detection technology efforts include research, development and fabrication of seismic, nonseismic, and satellite devices. Analytical support provides technical support to both arms control and intelligence concerns. The 1991 program provides for development of verification technologies for special nuclear materials, a START Treaty, increased analytical support activities, continued construction of the Center for National Security and Arms Control, and start of construction activities for the Foreign Technology Assessment Center.

Materials production.—This program provides nuclear materials to meet near-term national defense and nondefense requirements and sustain a base production program capable of meeting long-term nuclear materials production requirements consistent with the annual Presidential Nuclear Weapons Stockpile Memorandum and the annual Materials Management Plan. In 1991 this program will be upgrading and operating a reactor feed material production complex, production reactors, chemical processing plants, and support facilities integral to the operation of these facilities.

Waste transportation and site management.—This program provides for Department-wide nuclear material transportation requirements and maintaining site-wide infrastructure at Idaho and Hanford.

Nuclear safeguards and security.—This program provides for the development of measures for the protection of nuclear weapons, nuclear materials, and facilities against theft, sabotage, espionage, and terrorist activity. Also provided is technical support to international activities designed to minimize the proliferation of nuclear weapons. In the area of classification and technology policy, this program protects classified and unclassified sensitive information critical to the National security and controls nuclear energy-related exports.

Security investigations.—This program ensures that the common defense and the security of the United States will not be endangered by the granting of security clearances for personnel who, in the performance of their official duties, must have access to restricted data, National security information or special nuclear material, or who occupy a designated critical sensitive position. Security investigations are used as a basis to determine whether individuals are an acceptable security risk for such access.

Naval reactors development.—This program provides for the design, development, and testing of improved naval nuclear propulsion plants and reactor cores having increased reliability, improved performance, and simplified operating and maintenance requirements. These reactors are necessary to meet a variety of military requirements. During 1991 work will continue to improve existing submarine and surface ship reactors and plant components and to develop advanced reactor concepts and propulsion plants. This program also continues facility upgrading and provides equipment to support ongoing reactor design and testing activities.

New production reactors.—This program provides for the acquisition and construction of New Production Reactor capacity to meet National security requirements. It provides for the planning and development of a program to insure safety, quality and environmental protection as well as timely completion of the new facilities. During FY 1991 activities will include: compliance with National Environmental Policy Act requirements, design of the reactors, development and implementation of the safety review process, initiation of facility engineering and design, and tritium target development.

High energy physics.—Research in this program focuses on the fundamental constituents of matter, the fundamental forces in nature and the tranformations between matter and energy at the most elemental level. The program includes experimental and theoretical particle physics research and related advanced accelerator and detector technology R&D. The primary mode of experimental research involves the study of collisions of energetic particles using large particle accelerators or colliding beam facilities by means of advanced multiparticle detector systems and associated electronics. Research in 1991 will continue studies of known fundamental constituents of particles, initiate searches for new particle constituents, and continue to pursue a unified description of the four fundamental forces in nature.

The 1991 high energy physics budget request provides for continued research at the Tevatron, the Stanford Linear Collider (SLC), the Alternating Gradient Synchrotron (AGS) and advanced accelerator and detector R&D related to next generation high energy particle accelerators. The operation of the Tevatron will provide the capability for utilizing Fermilab's superconducting synchrotron as a 900 GeV on 900 GeV proton anti-proton collider and as a 800 GeV fixed target facility, while Stanford Linear Accelerator Center's SLC will produce 50 GeV on 50 GeV electron-positron collisions. Both facilities will allow access into previously unexplored areas of high energy physics. The request also provides continuing support for effective participation by university based groups in experimental research including accelerator user group efforts and non-accelerator experiments, and for theoretical research efforts. The 1991 high energy physics capital equipment request provides for meeting the highest priority needs associated with the detectors required to implement the research programs using the new capabilities being provided by the Tevatron proton anti-proton collider at Fermilab and by the SLC electron-positron collider at SLAC. The construction request provides for continuation of the upgrade of the linear accelerator at the Fermi National Laboratory.

Superconducting Super Collider.—The Superconducting Super Collider (SSC) is a proposed new powerful particle accelerator capable of exploring the TEV mass region essential to advancing understanding of the fundamental nature of matter and energy. In 1991, R&D efforts will continue on magnet design, testing and fabrication, design and testing of other collider technical systems and on detector R&D. The request for capital equipment is in support of these R&D programs. Construction funding requested in 1991 will be used for the magnet industrialization program and the first major technical systems fabrication.

Nuclear physics.—Research in this program strives to attain a deeper understanding of the interactions, properties, and structures of atomic nuclei and nuclear matter at a fundamental level through interdependent accelerator experiments and theoretical investigations of atomic nuclei. Program emphasis in 1991 centers on the role that quarks play in the makeup and interactions of nuclei, nuclei as proving grounds for understanding the basic strong and electroweak forces of nature, possible existence of new forms of nuclear matter, and the mechanisms by which colliding nuclei exchange mass, energy and angular momentum. The program supports qualified scientists and research groups conducting experiments in nuclear physics accelerator facilities around the world.

The 1991 nuclear physics budget requests start of construction for the Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider (RHIC) at Brookhaven and continued construction of the Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility at Newport News, Virginia.

The request provides for research and operations of the LAMPF facility at Los Alamos, AGS/Tandem facility at Brookhaven, the Bevalac at Lawrence Berkeley, and three smaller low energy heavy ion facilities. The program also supports the operation of four dedicated university accelerator facilities.

General science program direction.—Provides direction, management, and administrative support to HEP and NP programs within general science.

ENERGY SUPPLY, RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT ACTIVITIES—Continued

under examination in the energy supply, research and development mission.

Solar and renewable energy technology base.—The solar and renewable programs support research and development that will strengthen the technology base on which industry can draw in developing future new products and processes for the commercial market. The programs support activities ranging from basic research in universities and national laboratories to applied R&D and proof-of-concept projects in industrial firms.

The 1991 solar energy program represents a major commitment to exploiting the energy supply potential of photovoltaics, biofuels, energy from municipal solid wastes, low and moderate temperature solar thermal, and wind energy technologies. The program is highly focused on those technologies having a high potential for supplying significant quantities of future electric power and transportation fuels, and includes broad based activities which range from more basic research at universities and laboratories to applied R&D and cooperative research with industry to reduce technology advances to commercial practice. Important research support activities including technology transfer, international cooperative activities, resource assessments, program support and program direction, and for capital improvements at the Solar Energy Research Institute are also supported within the solar energy program.

The 1991 geothermal program will support basic and applied engineering and reservoir technology research in hydrothermal energy extraction technologies for geothermal energy and technical information and technology transfer. The program effort will also include research on geothermal resources such as engineering development in geopressured and hot dry rock resources.

The 1991 hydropower program represents a commitment to resolving technical and institutional regulatory impediments to developing and maintaining hydropower development including dissolved oxygen below hydroplants, instream flow requirements, and cumulative environmental impacts that are constraining development and causing licensing delays. Studies and coordinating activities to address these issues will be initiated.

The 1991 electric energy systems program represents a significant commitment to continuing the development of high temperature superconductivity (HTS) and includes major support to the HTS pilot centers in response to industrial expressions of interest. Additional research efforts relating to EMP effects and new materials for efficient electrical power transmission, biomedical research on effects of electric fields, and future electric system reliability and control concepts are also supported. The 1991 energy storage program will continue its generic research into proton exchange membrane fuel cells and electrochemistry for a variety of battery types.

Nuclear fission.—In 1991 the Civilian Reactor Development program continues on two parallel and complementary paths to ensure that nuclear energy continues to make a vital contribution to national energy security. The Light Water Reactor (LWR) program will focus on institutional and regulatory reform through supporting technology efforts and legislative initiatives. Cooperative programs with industry have the objective of providing certified advanced LWR designs in the early 1990's that could be ordered by utilities. The Advanced Reactor R&D program will focus on the development of the Modular High Temperature Gas Reactor program and Integral Fast Reactor (IFR) metal fuel cycle for the Advanced Liquid Metal Reactor (ALMR) program. The space and defense and advanced radioisotope power systems programs will continue to develop and produce nuclear power systems for use in U.S. space missions and in support of the Strategic Defense Initiatives Office and other military and civilian applications.

Environment, Safety and Health.—In mid-1989, the Secretary of Energy announced a major change in DOE managerial philosophy, and in consequence of that change the Secretary realigned several functions that bear upon the 1990 and 1991 budgets and operations of the Office of Environment, Safety and Health. The realignment transfers responsibility for nuclear reactor and non-reactor nuclear oversight and policy development to Defense Programs and Nuclear Energy Programs respectively. Following the realignment announcement the Secretary placed into effect a number of new initiatives which provided new direction and put increased emphasis on certain functions of the Office.

The intent of these functional changes and initiatives is: to restore credibility with the public in the ability of the DOE to manage its facilities safely and in an environmentally sound manner; to demonstrate a stronger commitment of the DOE to compliance with environmental regulations and protection of worker and public safety and health, and to reestablish full accountability for environment, safety and health in the line management organizations.

In the new alignment, the Office of Environment, Safety and Health is assigned responsibility for the following functions:

(1) Perform independent assessments, audits and appraisals of Departmental activities related to environmental protection, radiation safety, worker safety, non-nuclear safety, emergency preparedness and response, and those aspects of public health and safety that deal with epidemiology and radiological protection at DOE facilities.

(2) Develop Departmental policy related to the areas subject to oversight of the Office as identified in (1) above.

(3) Assess the DOE Headquarters Program Offices and DOE Field Offices performance in fostering excellence in contractor operations.

(4) Maintain liaison with recognized authorities in the fields of radiation protection, environmental protection, and non-nuclear safety.

(5) Continue responsibility for the DOE Environmental Issues Coordination Process and provide technical assistance and support to line management in the design and implementation of corrective activities to achieve compliance.

(6) Conduct oversight of National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) related activities in all DOE program areas.

As a direct result of the Secretary's 10-point initiative program, the Office is responsible for the implementation of the environmental "tiger team assessments" initiative which began in 1989. The 1991 budget therefore provides for needed sampling and analysis support for this activity. The "tiger team assessments" complements the planned program of environmental audits; the assessments will identify all potential substantive, procedural and managerial environmental compliance problems and the audit will provide proper follow-up to assure compliance with applicable requirements.

Major efforts begun in 1990 to establish uniform guidance and procedures for NEPA implementation will be brought to completion in 1991. NEPA compliance assessments are continuing as a part of the "tiger team assessment" activity and in general the NEPA oversight program demands are increasing along with DOE project developments.

Establishing effective compliance agreements with the States and EPA continues to be a focus of environmental issues coordination and oversight. Oversight of the ES&H aspects of the DOE award fee system, a new responsibility assigned in 1990, will continue in 1991. Similar oversight efforts are continuing relative to the development and implementation of the Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Five-Year Plan. Extending efforts begun in 1990. A focus of functional safety appraisals will be to ensure that DOE operations are in compliance with applicable OSHA standards.

Biological and environmental research.—This program develops the knowledge base necessary to identify, understand and anticipate the long-term health and environmental consequences of energy use and development and utilizes the Department's unique scientific and technological capabilities to solve major scientific problems in the environment, medicine and biology. Planned 1991 activities include programs in atmospheric processes as they relate to global climate change; terrestrial and oceanographic processes; epidemiology; molecular, cellular and systemic studies on the biological effects of radiation, including radon emissions; and medical applications of nuclear technology. Additional funds in 1991 are also provided for the Human Genome Initiative and for carbon dioxide research to determine the quantitative linkage between the rise of greenhouse gases and global warming.

Spill test facility.—The overall goal is to conduct user-sponsored spill tests in support of safety research associated with the handling, shipping and storage of liquefied gaseous fuels and other hazardous fluids. The 1991 effort will be directed to assuring program continuity and facility responsiveness to user sponsored testing activities and to provide support to the long-range, collaborative, R&D effort among DOE, EPA and DOT.

Magnetic fusion.—The goal of this program is to establish the scientific and technological base required for fusion energy. An independent high level review of fusion is scheduled to be conducted in 1990, including a new draft policy for fusion. The 1991 budget request represents an attempt to preserve an amount of funding which does not in any way try to presume the eventual conclusion of the review. The budget provided is for continuing the program as much as possible as it was in 1990 with a focus on confinement physics. There will be no change in program balance until the Secretary's review of the program is completed. Once the review is completed, budget estimates will be revised as necessary.

Supporting research and technical analysis.—The role of these programs is to expand the scientific and engineering base for future energy technology development and to provide independent, objective evaluations of energy research activities. Support is also provided for university related research and manpower training including the use of facilities at the national laboratories for student research and education.

Basic energy sciences.—This program funds basic research in the physical, biological, and engineering sciences in support of both the nuclear and non-nuclear technology programs. The principal focus of the program is energy; however, a number of other important national goals are also supported including U.S. leadership in science and technology and the training of scientists and engineers. In 1991, work will continue in materials sciences, chemical sciences, advanced energy projects, energy biosciences, and research in engineering systems, applied mathematics, and the geosciences. Research related to advanced materials development, combustion, chemistry of coal, catalysts, photochemistry, and nondestructive evaluation techniques will be continued, as well as an expanded program in x-ray lithography and increased emphasis on high performance computing. In 1991 the enhanced program of research on the new high temperature superconductivity materials will also be continued.

Funding will also be continued for each of the major national user facilities supported by the Basic Energy Sciences Program. In 1991, construction will continue on the 1-2 GeV synchrotron radiation source at Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory and construction funds also will be provided for construction of a 6-7 GeV synchrotron radiation source at Argonne National Laboratory and to support the associated, on-going R&D programs.

University research instrumentation.—This program supports the purchase of state-of-the-art scientific instrumentation used in energy-related research areas such as geological sciences, materials characterization, catalysis, and health effects research.

University and Science Education.—This program helps maintain strong scientific/technical research capabilities in support of the Department's long-range energy R&D mission in the university and private sector and the national laboratories. Specific activities supported include: university reactor fuel assistance; university laboratory cooperative science centers; energy manpower development; related education and training activities; and R&D technology transfer activities.

Energy research analysis.—This activity involves the independent assessment of existing or proposed technological initiatives, including examination of the base of research that underlies energy supply and utilization technologies.

Multiprogram energy laboratories facilities support.—The goal of the multiprogram energy laboratories facilities support program is to provide funds for rehabilitating and replacing deficient common-use utilities, roads, and buildings at the multiprogram laboratories.

In-house energy management.—This program funds energy conservation retrofit projects at Department facilities. These projects are designed to improve the efficiency of DOE energy use and set an example for other Federal agencies and the private sector. Surveys are conducted to identify cost-effective candidate projects and projects are then selected on a competitive basis using as the primary criterion the greatest economic return.

Technical information management program.—This program contributes to DOE's missions in advancing energy and nuclear defense technologies and protecting U.S. economic and military security through the effective management and control of the Department's scientific and technical knowledge which is contained in its information resources. Major objectives which are structured to meet the overall purpose are the effective management, control, and use of the results of DOE's multibillion dollar research program, and the acquisition and management of results of worldwide investment in energy R&D.

Facilities infrastructure replacement and modernization program.—This program supports a departmental initiative to conduct a condition assessment survey of all Department of Energy facilities.

Policy and management.—Provides executive direction, management assistance and administrative support to all programs within energy supply activities.

The Fossil Energy programs support research and development that will strengthen the technology base on which industry can draw in developing future new products and processes for the commercial market. The programs support activities ranging from basic research in universities and national laboratories to applied R&D and proof-of-concept projects in private sector firms.

Reductions in the Fossil Energy R&D programs are proposed in the 1991 budget that will reduce Federal in-house R&D at the Energy Technology Centers and will continue limited Federal support of company-specific technology development and demonstration activities. The program continues to fund high-priority, high risk and cross-cutting research that will improve the Nation's ability to cleanly and efficiently use coal, and to enhance the economic recovery of our oil and gas reserves.

Coal R&D.—The objectives of this program will be to continue generic, technology base and environmental research to provide an adequate scientific and engineering knowledge base to foster technological advances by the private sector. The 1991 research program provides for a continued, limited Federal role in high-risk R&D that supports technology development by the private sector. These efforts will include the Advanced Research and Technology Development program, with additional advanced research efforts conducted in the Advanced Research portions of the Coal Liquefaction, Control Technology and Coal Preparation, Combustion Systems, Fuel Cells, and Surface Coal Gasification programs. Another main thrust of the 1991 program will focus upon environmental technology R&D. Therefore, the Control Technology and Coal Preparation program will share with Advanced Research and Technology Development a major portion of the funding request, as will Combustion Systems to a lesser degree. Efforts will also continue to more effectively utilize our coal resources by continuing programs in the areas of Coal Liquefaction, Fuel Cells, and Heat Engines. Environmental efforts will also continue within the Underground Coal Gasification program.

Oil, gas and shale.—Advanced extraction technology development efforts will continue within the Advanced Extraction and Process Technology (AEPT), Enhanced Oil Recovery (EOR), Oil Shale, and Unconventional Gas Recovery (UGR) programs. In addition, the 1991 program includes an integrated initiative, which will provide $17 million to competitively support oil and gas recovery and geoscience consortia with industry and leading universities. Eligible consortia will include multiple companies, and will provide at least 50 percent cost sharing.

Program direction and management support.—This program provides the funding for both Headquarters and field personnel and overhead expenses in Fossil Energy. In addition, it provides support for the day-to-day project management functions.

Federal Inspector for the Alaska natural gas pipeline.—Activities formerly included under the Office of the Federal Inspector for the Alaska natural gas pipeline are now funded in this line item, in accordance with the 1986 appropriation.

Environmental restoration.—The Department of Energy is assisting in payments for the environmental clean-up of a former project of the Synthetic Fuels Corporation (the western processing site of the SRC-II project) as required by the Environmental Protection Agency. Funding is also provided for environmental cleanup of two deactivated gasifiers at the Rockwell site in California.

Fuels conversion.—This program will continue regulatory reviews and oversight of the transmission of natural gas and electricity across the U.S. borders and processes certification of alternate fuel capability.

This program includes those activities necessary to operate, explore, conserve, develop, and produce the naval petroleum reserves at the maximum efficient rate and to conserve the oil shale reserves. This includes routine operation and maintenance, development and exploration drilling, environmental and conservation work, and construction and installation of on-reserve facilities and related systems required for the collection, storage, and distribution of produced petroleum and related products. The 1991 budget proposes to lease NPR–1 and NPR–3 competitively at the end of 1991. The fields would be leased with competition expressed in terms of the royalty rate bidders would be willing to pay the Government after payment of a lease bonus of $1.6 billion. The lease bonus would be in installments of $1 billion at the end of 1991, $300 million at the end of 1992, and $300 million at the end of 1993. The creation of a Defense Petroleum Inventory (DPI) of 10 million barrels, located in the Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR), is also proposed. The oil for the DPI would be placed in the SPR over a five-year period beginning in 1992. Both the oil for the DPI and the facilities for its storage would be funded from lease royalty payments.

The energy conservation programs support research and development that will strengthen the technology base on which industry can draw in developing future new products and processes for the commercial market. The programs support activities ranging from basic research in universities and national laboratories to applied R&D and proof-of-concept projects in industrial firms. A balanced program is proposed for 1991 that includes selective new initiatives to encourage the use of new energy efficiency measures.

Buildings and community systems.—The fiscal year 1991 buildings and community systems program will support research in building systems, community systems, technology and consumer products, appliance standards, the Federal energy management program, and technology assessment and transfer activities to assist the private sector in adopting new energy-conserving technologies for new and existing buildings. New initiatives planned for 1991 include integrated resource planning to expand the Least-Cost Utility Planning program, steps to accelerate the implementation of building energy conservation standards and guidelines, and a program to showcase opportunities for improved lighting efficiency in Federal facilities.

Industrial.—The fiscal year 1991, Industrial conservation program will continue the research and development of generic technologies in waste energy reduction and improved process efficiency and industrial cogeneration. These programs involve combustion technology, advanced heat exchangers and heat pumps, and the development of new energy efficient processes for the production of materials and products. The program also includes transfer of information on developed technologies. The 1991 program continues the Metals Initiative, and provides for an increase in the number of Energy Analysis and Diagnostic Centers. These activities provide a broad technology base which contributes to more efficient industrial operations and more effective utilization of energy.

Transportation.—The fiscal year 1991 transportation program will support cross-cutting R&D in advanced high-temperature materials including work conducted at the High-Temperature Materials Lab and in alternative vehicle propulsion concepts such as the automotive gas turbine and adiabatic diesel. It will support expanded activities required by the Alternative Motor Fuels Act as well as research, development and testing of electric and hybrid vehicle batteries and propulsion systems, and technology assessment and transfer.

Multisector.—The fiscal year 1991 multisector program will support cross-cutting R&D activities of the Energy Conservation and Utilization Technologies (ECUT) program in such areas as combustion and thermal sciences, materials science, biocatalysis, and tribology. Research is conducted at universities, National labs and private industry. International research monitoring activities on behalf of all the conservation programs will also be supported. The multisector budget also supports the Energy-Related Inventions Program, which assists independent inventors to further develop their inventions, as well as the National Appropriate Technology Assistance Service, which provides technical information in response to inquiries from individuals, small businesses and other organizations.

State and local assistance programs.—The fiscal year 1991 State and local assistance programs will provide incentive funding for the States through the Weatherization Assistance Program. Funds will be provided to test innovative program approaches, and to leverage non-governmental funding sources. Funds are also provided for oversight and monitoring of State use of oil overcharge funds.

Policy and management.—Provides for overall management guidance and program evaluation for energy conservation programs to ensure effective program delivery.

Facilities.—Funds are requested for the Combustion Research Facility in fiscal year 1991.

This account provides for the acquisition, transportation, and injection of petroleum into the Strategic Petroleum Reserve and for its drawdown and distribution. The budget proposes to fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserve in 1991 at a daily average rate of approximately 59,000 barrels a day. This fill rate assures additional funding for SPR oil fill from excess 1990 receipts of Naval Petroleum Reserves, as defined in Public Law 101-121.

This program supports energy information activities which are designed to provide timely, accurate and relevant energy information for use by the Administration, the Congress, and the general public.

National energy information system.—The activities funded in this program include the design, development and maintenance of information systems on petroleum, natural gas, coal, nuclear, electricity, alternate fuel sources, and energy consumption. This includes collecting data and ensuring its accuracy; preparing short-term forecasts; and preparing reports on energy sources, end-uses, prices, supply and demand, and associated economic, international, and financial matters. This program also includes the operation of the Energy Information Administration (EIA) computer facility, telecommunications support, customer services, and ADP software support to the Department of Energy and others. In addition, the National Energy Information Center disseminates publications, analytic reports, information directives, and public use tapes, and responds to public inquiries. Finally, this activity provides survey and statistical design standards, documentation standards, and energy data public-use forms clearance and burden control services.

Policy and management.—This program provides direction to EIA through the Office of the Administrator; provides funding for administrative services; and provides administrative support to EIA program offices in the area of planning, budgeting, contract administration, personnel, and administrative services.

Economic regulation.—The Economic Regulatory Administration (ERA) is responsible for pursuing and finalizing any remaining enforcement actions to ensure that oil companies complied with petroleum regulations in effect prior to decontrol of oil in January 1981. In January 1989, the Office of Fuels Programs, OFP, was transferred from the Economic Regulatory Administration (ERA) to the Fossil Energy Research and Development program. It is intended that in FY 1990, ERA will continue to provide administrative support to the Fuel program, however, the Fossil Energy Research and Development program will assume these costs in FY 1991.

Hearings and appeals.—The Office of Hearings and Appeals issues all final orders of an adjudicatory nature other than those over which the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission or the Board of Contract Appeals has jurisdiction. It decides appeals of petroleum enforcement actions and adverse Freedom of Information Act and Privacy Act determinations, examines requests for exception relief, and administers refund proceedings involving funds obtained as a result of petroleum enforcement actions.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) is charged with regulating certain interstate aspects of the natural gas, hydroelectric, oil pipeline, and electric industries. Such regulation includes issuing licenses, approving rates, inspecting dams and enforcement activities and providing other services to regulated businesses. In 1991, these businesses will pay fees and charges sufficient to offset the Commission's cost of providing licenses, inspections and other services.

Natural gas regulation.—The Commission regulates 150 natural gas pipeline companies and more than 9,700 natural gas producers. Responsibilities include issuing certificates of public convenience and necessity for natural gas pipelines, determining rates for the transportation and sale of natural gas, administering wellhead pricing provisions in accordance with the Natural Gas Policy Act, and establishing curtailment and other provisions. Producer certificates and rates are also reviewed by the Commission.

Hydropower licensing regulation.—The Commission issues preliminary permits and exemption licenses for hydroelectric projects, enforces the terms and conditions, and performs dam safety inspections. There are currently more than 1,000 hydroelectric projects under license, which supply 12 percent of the electric energy generated in the United States. The Commission also performs investigations of headwater benefits that are derived from Federally-owned or licensed headwater improvements.

Oil pipeline regulation.—The Commission's responsibilities include the establishment of just and reasonable transportation rates. Approximately 138 common carrier oil pipeline companies, including the Trans-Alaska Pipeline System (TAPS), are currently under the jurisdiction of the FERC. The valuation of these regulated companies approximates $21 billion.

Electric power regulation.—The Commission is responsible for determining rates for the interstate sale or transmission of wholesale electric energy for more than 200 electric utilities and for overseeing electric utility corporate transactions. The Commission approves rates for all Federal power marketing agencies except TVA. The Commission also certifies cogenerators and small power producers.

Public Law 99–190, making continuing appropriations for 1986, provided $400 million from funds in the Energy Security Reserve in the Department of the Treasury for a new Clean Coal Technology Program in the Department of Energy. This program was authorized under the Clean Coal Technology Reserve proviso of Public Law 98–473 to subsidize the construction and operation of facilities to demonstrate the potential commercial feasibility of such technologies.

Of the $400 million, $100 million was made available for obligation beginning in 1986, $150 million in 1987, and $150 million in 1988. These amounts were reduced by .6 percent pursuant to section 325 of the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1986, as included in section 101(d) of Public Law 99–190.

The fiscal year 1991 program includes both a continuation of funding for the second and third rounds of cost-shared Innovative Clean Coal Technology projects and initiation of funding for a fourth round of projects, which will be solicited in the spring of 1990. The advance appropriations requested will also fully fund the fifth and final round of projects, to be solicited in 1991. These projects demonstrate technologies appropriate for replacing, retrofitting or modernizing existing coal-fired facilities to provide significantly reduced emissions of potential acid rain precursors. Projects are cost-shared, with industry providing at least half of the funding, and with provisions for the Government to recoup its investment through a share of revenues if the technology is commercialized.

This program was established in 1980 for the purpose of expediting the development and production of alternative fuels.

When the Synthetic Fuels Corporation was declared to be operational in 1982, the uncommitted and unobligated funds remaining in the program were transferred to the Energy Security Reserve for use by the Synthetic Fuels Corporation, with the exception of the loan guarantee for the Great Plains Gasification Project, which remained under the jurisdiction of the Department of Energy. The Department exercised its authority to borrow from the Treasury to repay the Federal Financing Bank upon default of the borrower in 1985. This loan was repaid, along with accrued interest, by a Supplemental appropriation in 1986. The Department acquired ownership of the Great Plains plant by foreclosure, which was completed on July 14, 1986, and continued operation of the plant without the expenditure of appropriated funds. On October 31, 1988, the Department completed the process of returning the Great Plains Gasification Plant to the private sector by settlement with Basin Electric Power Cooperative Association. Under the terms of the agreement a check for $85 million was provided to the Government as an initial payment. In addition, this transaction has a potential return, to the Government, of approximately $1.8 billion in immediate and long-term payments, tax credit waivers, and income taxes. The sales agreement also includes a commitment to keep the facility operating through the year 2009 as long as revenues exceed expenses.

The Isotope Production and Distribution program is directed towards the production, sale and distribution of isotope products and services to the user community utilizing Government-owned facilities. The isotopes produced by the Department of Energy are those that can be produced in existing DOE production and research facilities dedicated to the products required by the Isotope Production and Distribution program. The isotopes are sold at their market value or at a price determined to be in the best interest of the government for use in industrial applications, hospital and medical facilities, and Government, university, and industrial research programs.

United States Uranium Enrichment Corporation (revolving fund)—Legislation for the United States Uranium Enrichment Corporation has been submitted to the Congress to create a wholly-owned Government Corporation that would be responsible for maintaining a reliable and economical domestic source of enrichment services (enrichment of uranium and uranium compounds in the isotope U–235). The Corporation is to be self-financing and would not require appropriations or other sources of Government financing. The Corporation will also continue to meet the paramount objectives of ensuring the Nation's common defense and security, to conduct research and development and other activities necessary to meet the objectives of the Corporation, as defined in the proposed legislation.

The Corporation is being proposed to provide a long-term competitive, well-managed and efficient enrichment public enterprise fund to enhance national security, maximize the return to the taxpayer for the investment in uranium enrichment, and enhance the prospects for future transfer to the private sector. The Corporation will be required to make annual payments to the Treasury for interest on an initial debt of $364,000,000 and establish a fund in the Treasury to cover future expenditures for decontaminating and decommissioning the enrichment plants. The Corporation will also provide dividends to the Treasury on Government held stock.

In 1991, the Corporation budget provides for: (1) operation of the gaseous diffusion plants at Paducah, Kentucky and Portsmouth, Ohio; (2) continuation of the Atomic Vapor Laser Isotope Separation demonstration program at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, California and in Oak Ridge, Tennessee; (3) continuation of corrective actions, environmental restoration and waste management activities at the gaseous diffusion sites; and (4) to collect revenues and return to the Treasury $29,000,000 in interest on the initial debt.

Note.—The proposed public enterprise fund will take over responsibility for the programs funded under the Uranium Supply and Enrichment Activities account in the Department of Energy.

The Alaska Power Administration (APA) is responsible for operation and maintenance and power marketing for the Eklutna and Snettisham hydroelectric projects in accordance with the authorizing legislation for each project.

The agency's normal activities will continue in 1991. Proprietary receipts are estimated to be $9,299,000 in 1991.

In 1991 the Administration will continue to work with the State of Alaska and local customers and companies in an effort to complete arrangements to sell assets of the Alaska Power Administration. Legislation is expected to be submitted in 1990. The budget assumes authorization and completion of the sale at the end of 1991.

The Southeastern Power Administration (SEPA) markets power generated at Corps of Engineers hydroelectric generating plants in a 10-State area of the Southeast. Deliveries are made by means of transmission facilities owned by others. There are 22 projects now in operation. A schedule of kilowatt capacity of projects in operation or under construction follows:

Projects in operation	3,092,375
Project under construction: Russell B. Russell (pumping units)	300,000
Total	3,392,375

SEPA sells power at wholesale primarily to publicly and cooperatively-owned electric distribution utilities using wheeling and pooling agreements with the region's large private utilities to provide firm power to its customers. SEPA does not own or operate any transmission facilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic electric rate adjustments to insure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements.

The administration proposes to sell certain exclusive power marketing rights of SEPA in 1991 to existing power customers. Appropriate legislation will be developed and submitted in 1990.

Beginning in 1991, the revenue estimates would increase by $87,206,000 to reflect the administration proposal to place power repayment practices on a more business-like basis that provides straight-line amortization of the Federal investment with interest on the unpaid balances accruing at current market interest rates. The administration intends to submit legislation to implement these changes.

The SEPA program includes the following activities:

System operation and maintenance.—Provision is made for negotiation and administration of power contracts, collection of revenues, development of wholesale power rates, the amortization of power investment, investigation and planning of proposed water resources projects, scheduling and dispatch of power generation, scheduling storage and release of water, administration of contractual operation requirements, and determination of methods of operating generating plants individually and in coordination with others to obtain maximum utilization of resources. Proprietary receipts deposited in the Treasury were $111,605,438 for 1989 and are estimated to be $128,545,000 for 1990. Proprietary receipts are expected to be $162,953,000 for 1991.

Purchase power and wheeling.—Provision is made for the payment of wheeling fees and for the purchase of electricity in connection with disposal of power under contracts with utility companies.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, SOUTHWESTERN POWER ADMINISTRATION

For necessary expenses of operation and maintenance of power transmission facilities and of marketing electric power and energy, and for construction and acquisition of transmission lines, substations and appurtenant facilities, and for administrative expenses, including official reception and representation expenses in an amount not to exceed $1,500 connected therewith, in carrying out the provisions of section 5 of the Flood Control Act of 1944 (16 U.S.C. 825s), as applied to the southwestern power area, [$25,172,000] $20,107,000, to remain available until expended; in addition, notwithstanding the provisions of 31 U.S.C. 3302, not to exceed [$11,723,000] $8,899,000 in reimbursements, to remain available until expended: Provided, That the continuing fund established by the Act of October 12, 1949, c. 680, title I, section 101, as amended, shall also be available on an ongoing basis for paying for purchase power and wheeling expenses when the Administrator determines that such expenditures are necessary to meet contractual obligations for the sale and delivery of power during periods of below-average hydropower generation. Payments from the continuing fund shall be limited to the amount required to replace the generation deficiency, and only for the project where the deficiency occurred. Replenishment of the fund shall occur within twelve months of the month in which the funds were first expended. (Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1990.)

The Southwestern Power Administration (SWPA) operates as a marketing agent for hydroelectric power produced at Corps of Engineers dams in a six-State area. It also operates and maintains some 1,380 miles of high voltage transmission lines, 24 substations and switching stations and 35 radio and microwave stations. SWPA sells its power at wholesale primarily to publicly and cooperatively owned electric distribution utilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to insure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements.

SWPA also is responsible for scheduling and dispatching power, negotiating power sales contracts, and constructing facilities required to meet changing customer load requirements.

Beginning in 1991, the revenue estimates would increase by $63,728,000 to reflect the administration proposal to place power repayment practices on a more business-like basis that provides straight-line amortization of the Federal investment with interest on the unpaid balances accruing at current market interest rates. The administration intends to submit legislaiton to implement these changes.

Systems operation and maintenance.—Provision is made for investigating and planning proposed water resources projects, scheduling and dispatching power generation, scheduling storage and release of water, administering contractual operation requirements, and determining methods of operating generating plants individually and in coordination with others to obtain maximum utilization of resources. Provision also is made for maintenance of the transmission system and related facilities to assure reliable service, negotiation and administration of power contracts, collection of revenue, development of wholesale power rates and the amortization of the power investment. Estimated proprietary receipts which are deposited in the Treasury are $79,154,000 in 1989, and are estimated to be $86,375,000 in 1990. Proprietary receipts are expected to be $87,538,000 in 1991.

Purchase power and wheeling.—Provision is made for the payment of wheeling fees and for the purchase of energy in connection with the marketing of power under contracts with utility companies.

Construction.—The construction program provides transmission, substation and switching facilities to transmit power generated at Corps of Engineers' hydroelectric projects in the Southwest. This program is coordinated with the Corps of Engineers' construction program and customer requirements in order that transmission and related facilities will be in place when these power projects are completed and available for marketing. This program also provides for the purchase of capital electrical equipment used for upgrading the established system to meet changing customer load requirements.

Reimbursable program.—This program involves services provided by Southwestern Power Administration to others under various types of reimbursable arrangements. In 1991 the reimbursable program primarily provides for operation and maintenance, construction, and power and energy services. The power and energy service supports the requirements of three government agencies: Ft. Sill, Vance Air Force Base and McAlester Army Ammunition Plant, and direct purchase of energy for the Oklahoma municipalities.

The Western Area Power Administration (Western) markets electric power in 15 western States from Federally-owned power plants operated primarily by the Bureau of Reclamation, Corps of Engineers and the International Boundary and Water Commission. Western operates and maintains over 16,000 miles of high-voltage transmission lines and over 250 substation/switchyards and constructs transmission facilities, including new transmission lines, substations and essential additions and modifications to existing facilities.

Western sells power at wholesale to electric distribution utilities. In keeping with statutory requirements, Western's long-term power contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power facilities, with interest.

Systems operation and maintenance.—A total of 13 power systems will be operated and maintained. Revenue will be available from Boulder Canyon project operations for Western's power marketing and transmission expenses, without further appropriation, as provided in the Hoover Power Plant Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-381). Western will continue to participate in conservation and renewable energy programs in 1991.

Power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, cooperatives, irrigation districts, public utility districts, State and Federal government agencies, and private utilities. Receipts are deposited in the Reclamation fund, the General fund, the Colorado River Dam fund, the Lower Colorado River Basin Development fund, and the Upper Colorado River Basin fund.

Energy sales and revenues resulting from these Western power systems operations, excluding the Colorado River Storage project and the Colorado River Basin project, are as follows:

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Energy sales (millions of kilowatt hours)	28,821	29,517	29,354
Revenues from energy sales (in thousands of dollars)	466,450	511,607	517,789

Beginning in 1991, the revenue estimates would increase by $144,069,000 to reflect the administration proposal to place power repayment practices on a more business-like basis that provides straight-line amortization of the Federal investment with interest on the unpaid balances accruing at current market interest rates. The administration intends to submit legislation to implement these changes.

Purchase of power and wheeling.—The program provides for purchase of power and wheeling. Financing of this program consists of $70,995,000 of new budget authority, $1,440,000 of permanent budget authority, $13,401,000 associated with net billing procedures, $70,000,000 associated with customer bill crediting, $38,350,000 associated with reimbursement from other Federal entities, $2,929,000 associated with Bonneville Power Administration power transfers, and $27,565,000 of deferred funds, for a total program cost of $224,680,000.

System construction.—Construction of transmission facilities is necessary to maintain system reliability and for marketing electric power produced from generating plants of others. Funding is provided in 1991 for system interties, joint construction participation, replacement of deteriorated wood poles and damaged wood or steel structures, reconductoring and upgrading transmission lines to increase system capacity and reliability, construction of operation and maintenance facilities, and system security additions.

Reimbursable program.—This program involves services provided by Western to others under various types of reimbursable arrangements. In 1991, the reimbursable program primarily provides for construction and operation and maintenance services for the Bureau of Reclamation and for construction services associated with the California-Oregon Transmission project being built for non-Federal entities and for power purchases for other Federal entities.

Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) is the Federal electric power marketing agency in the Pacific Northwest. BPA markets hydroelectric power from 21 multipurpose water resource projects of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and 9 projects of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, plus some energy from non-Federal generating projects in the region. These generating resources and BPA's transmission system, planned by the end of 1991 to consist of an estimated 14,732 circuit miles of high-voltage transmission lines and 387 substations, are operated as an integrated power system with operating and financial results combined and reported as the Federal Columbia River Power System. BPA is the largest power wholesaler in the Northwest and provides about four-fifths of the region's electric power transmission capacity.

BPA is responsible for meeting the net firm power requirements of its requesting customers through a variety of means, including energy conservation programs, acquisition of renewable and other resources, and power exchanges with utilities both in and outside the region.

BPA will finance its operations on the basis of the self-financing authority provided by Federal Columbia River Transmission System Act of 1974 (Transmission Act) (Public Law 93–454) and the new borrowing authority provided by the Pacific Northwest Electric Power Planning and Conservation Act (Pacific Northwest Power Act) (Public Law 96–501) for energy conservation, renewable energy resources and capital fish facilities. Authority to borrow available to the BPA is available on a permanent, indefinite basis. The amount of borrowing outstanding at any time cannot exceed $3,750,000,000.

Operating expenses: Energy resources.—Provides for the orderly planning, acquisition, and oversight of reliable, cost-effective, environmentally acceptable resources, including resources purchased prior to the Pacific Northwest Power Act, as well as cost-effective conservation measures, including home energy efficiency, commercial energy efficiency, industrial technology transfers, solar energy applications and conservation measures for new home and commercial building construction. These resources are needed to serve BPA's portion of the region's forecasted net electric load requirements. Beginning in FY 1991, a portion of the conservation activities previously capitalized will be expensed to conform to prevailing industry accounting practices.

Residential exchange.—Provides for extending the benefits of low-cost Federal power to the residential and small farm customers of investor-owned and publicly-owned utilities, in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Transmission system development.—Provides funding from revenues for electric transmission research and development and program support of the capital investment program described below for transmission system development.

System operation.—Provides for operating an estimated 14,732 miles of line and 387 substations of the BPA transmission system during 1991.

System maintenance.—Provides for the annual expenses of maintaining the facilities and equipment of the BPA transmission system in 1991.

Power marketing.—Provides for forecasting regional demand; negotiating power sales and wheeling, billing, and servicing these contracts; reviewing and establishing wholesale power and wheeling rates; and encouraging public participation in the formation of BPA policies and programs.

Power scheduling.—Provides for the scheduling of power.

Fish and wildlife.—Provides funding from revenues in support of the capital investment program described below for fish and wildlife.

Planning Council.—Provides for activities of the Pacific Northwest Electric Power and Conservation Planning Council required by the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Interest.—Provides for payments to the U.S. Treasury for interest on borrowings to finance BPA's transmission system development, system maintenance, conservation related costs previously capitalized, capital equipment, and fish and wildlife programs under $3,750,000,000 borrowing authority provided by the Transmission Act as amended by the Pacific Northwest Power Act and replenished by Public Law 98–50. This category also includes, interest on Corps of Engineers, BPA and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation appropriated debt. Inclusion of these items is consistent with industry accounting procedures.

Associated project costs.—Provides for repayment of the operation and maintenance (O&M) costs of the 30 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation power generating projects, and amortization on the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation capital investment in power generating facilities.

Reimbursable.—Provides for reimbursable power purchases, and for services such as construction, operation and maintenance of transmission facilities when requested and financed by other entities. Also includes the coordination agreement payments to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Capital investments—energy resources.—Provides for funding conservation measures including home and commercial energy efficiency, industrial technology transfers, solar energy applications and conservation measures for new home and commercial building construction. Beginning in 1991 BPA will expense rather than capitalize certain conservation related promotional and overhead costs to conform with prevailing industry practices.

Transmission system development.—Provides for planning, design and construction of transmission lines, substation and control system additions, and enhancements to the FCRPS transmission system for a reliable, efficient and cost-effective regional transmission system. During 1991, BPA plans no new line or substation energization, although a variety of upgrades and additions to existing facilities will be energized during the year. The budget assumes that about two-thirds of the estimated construction, ownership, and operation and maintenance of the 3rd A.C. Intertie System upgrade in 1991 and beyond would be financed by non-Federal participants.

System maintenance.—Provides for planning, design, and construction work to repair or replace existing transmission lines, substations, control systems, and general facilities of the FCRPS transmission system.

Capital equipment.—Provides for general purpose ADP equipment, office furniture and equipment, and software development in support of all BPA programs.

Fish and wildlife.—Provides for protection, mitigation and enhancement of fish and wildlife affected by hydroelectric facilities on the Columbia River and its tributaries, in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Contingencies.—Although contingencies are not specifically funded, the need may arise to provide for purchase of power in low-water years; for repair and/or replacement of facilities affected by natural and man-made emergencies, including the resulting additional costs for contracting, construction, and operation and maintenance work; for unavoidable increased costs for the planned program due to necessary but unforeseen adjustments, including engineering and design changes, contractor and other claims and relocations, or for payment of a retrospective premium adjustment in excess nuclear property insurance policy, in the event one of the participating utilities has an accident with property damage in excess of $500 million.

Financing.—The Transmission Act provides for the use by BPA of all receipts, collections, and recoveries in cash from all sources, including the sale of bonds, to finance the annual budget programs of BPA. These receipts result primarily from the sale of power and wheeling. The Transmission Act also provides for authority to borrow from the U.S. Treasury at rates comparable to borrowings at open market rates for similar issues. As amended by the Pacific Northwest Power Act and replenished by Public Law 98-50, it allows for $3,750,000,000 of borrowing to be outstanding at any time. Fiscal Year 1991 capital program obligations are estimated to be $248.3 million, of which $170.1 million is new borrowing authority. To the extent BPA capital borrowing authority is insufficient in 1991, BPA would use cash reserves generated by revenues from customers to finance some of these investments.

In fiscal year 1989 BPA made payments to the Treasury of $606.4 million and also expects to make payments of $630.6 million in 1990 and $652.7 million in 1991 on a current services basis. The 1991 payment will be distributed as follows: U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service O&M, ($115.8 million), interest expense on bonds and appropriations ($345.8 million), allowance for funds used during construction—capitalized interest ($14.8 million) and amortization ($176.3 million).

The Administration is proposing legislation to modify the repayment criteria that would require BPA to raise its rates to finance an additional $590.4 million in payments to the Treasury in 1991. Of this $590.4 million, capital transfers would increase $409.5 million, associated project costs would increase by $53.3 million, and interest on Bureau appropriated debt would increase by $127.6 million. The proposal will provide for fixed straight line schedules for the amortization of the Federal investment, with interest on the unpaid balances accruing at current market interest rates.

Direct loans.—There will be no direct loans in 1991.

Operating results.—Total revenues and reimbursements are forecast at approximately $3,092.4 million in 1991.

It should be noted that BPA's revenue forecasts are based on several critical assumptions about both the supply of and demand for Federal energy. Deviation from the assumed conditions may result in variation in actual revenues of several hundred million dollars from the forecast. Estimated net operating income for 1991, based on BPA's current revenue and expense estimates, is $110.7 million, an increase of $54.7 million from 1990.

The Department of Energy will propose legislation to modify the repayment criteria that applies to the outstanding Federal investment to be repaid to the U.S. Treasury by the Bonneville Power Administration. The proposed legislation will provide for straight-line amortization of the Federal investment with interest on the unpaid balances accruing at current market interest rates.

Western's operation and maintenance and power marketing expenses for the Colorado River storage project, the Colorado River Basin project and the Fort Peck project are financed from power revenues.

Western operates and maintains approximately 3,000 miles of transmission lines and over 40 substations associated with these projects. Wholesale power is provided to utilities over interconnected high-voltage transmission systems. In keeping with statutory requirements, long-term power contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest.

Beginning in 1991, the revenue estimates would increase by $82,581,000 to reflect the Administration proposal to place power repayment practices on a more business-like basis that provides straight-line amortization of the Federal investment with interest on the unpaid balances accruing at current market interest rates. The Administration intends to submit legislation to implement these changes.

Colorado River storage project.—Western markets power and operates and maintains the power transmission facilities of the Colorado River storage project. Western also purchases electricity and pays wheeling fees to meet firm and nonfirm commitments.

Colorado River Basin project.—The Colorado River Basin project includes Western's expenses associated with the Central Arizona project and the United States entitlement from the Navajo coal-fired power plant. Revenues in excess of operating expenses are deposited in the Lower Colorado River Basin development fund.

Fort Peck project.—Revenue collected by Western is used to defray construction, operation and maintenance and power marketing expenses associated with the power generation and transmission facilities of the Fort Peck project, Corps of Engineers—Civil, and emergency expenses to ensure continuous operation. The Corps operates and maintains the power generating facilities, and Western operates and maintains the transmission system and performs power marketing functions.

Energy sales and revenue from the Colorado River Storage project and the Colorado River Basin project are shown in the table below. Revenue from the Fort Peck project is integrated with Pick-Sloan Missouri Basin program revenue and included in the revenue totals shown in the construction, rehabilitation operation and maintenance account.

The Department of Energy will propose legislation to modify the repayment criteria that applies to the outstanding Federal investment to be repaid to the U.S. Treasury by the Western Area Power Administration (WAPA). The proposed legislation will provide for straight-line amortization of the Federal investment with interest on the unpaid balances accruing at current market interest rates. Enactment of this legislation will increase revenues and reduce outlays from WAPA's Colorado River Basins Power Marketing Fund by $82,581,000.

This account would finance the Government contributions for Commissioned Officers retirement to fund, on an accrual basis, annuities of retired Public Health Service (PHS) commissioned officers and survivors of retirees. The 1991 payment funds the amortization of the unfunded liability for all retirement benefits earned by PHS Commissioned Officers before October 1, 1990. The amortization schedule for the unfunded liability was determined by the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services. Included in the unfunded liability are consolidated requirements for retirement and survivors' benefits.

Proposed legislation would provide for accrual funding of the Public Health Service Commissioned Corps retirement system and establish a retirement trust fund similar to the Department of Defense Military Retirement Fund established through Public Law 98-94. The fund would be financed through: (a) Federal contribution for retired pay and retirement pay of commissioned personnel on the retired lists; (b) Government contributions towards the unfunded retirement liability consisting of a normal cost accrual percentage applied to basic pay amounts contained in appropriations for the Department of Health and Human Services, Department of Transportation (Coast Guard), Department of Justice (Bureau of Prisons), Environmental Protection Agency, and other Federal and non-Federal entities; and (c) interest on investments.

The status of the fund would be as follows:

SURVEY AND CERTIFICATION REVOLVING FUND

There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States a Revolving Fund. Amounts in the Fund shall be available to the Secretary, without fiscal year limitation, to finance the costs of carrying out Federal and State survey and certification activities under Titles XVIII and XIX of the Social Security Act and activities under section 353 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 263a). Fees authorized by this paragraph and section 353(m) of the Public Health Service Act shall be deposited in and credited to the Fund. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, including but not limited to sections 1903 and 1919(g) of the Social Security Act, the Secretary shall establish and collect annually user fees from all providers and suppliers of services or items requesting certification under Titles XVIII or XIX of the Social Security Act (except clinical laboratories otherwise inspected and certified under section 353 of the Public Health Service Act) and payment thereof shall be made a condition of participation under said Titles. Such fees shall be determined annually in an amount sufficient to cover the estimated full cost of survey and certification activities not otherwise covered by fees collected pursuant to section 353(m) of the Public Health Service Act. These fees shall be collected annually from each provider or supplier, regardless of whether the provider or supplier will be surveyed in the year for which the fees are being charged, and fees may be collected through deductions from payments to be made under Titles XVIII and XIX of the Social Security Act. Fees may vary by group or classification of provider or supplier, or by the relative complexity, type, or estimated cost of planned surveys, based on such considerations as the Secretary deems appropriate. Fees established under this paragraph and section 353(m) of the Public Health Service Act shall be set and collected to maintain a minimum balance in the Fund equal to one month's estimated expenses.

The estimates included above reflect the impact of two legislative proposals which would extend Social Security coverage to all new employees of the District of Columbia and to employees of State and local governments not participating in a public employee retirement plan.

Proposed legislation would also provide for use of an income tax refund offset to recover overpayments made to former beneficiaries; eliminate normalized tax transfers; enable entitlement of surviving children adopted after the death of the worker; and conform Social Security benefits for railroad workers and their families with benefits available to all other workers covered by Social Security.

DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

This chapter presents the budget and program estimates for the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The major divisions of this chapter conform to the following Department activities:

Housing programs cover the Department's major housing subsidy programs except for those activities under the public and Indian housing programs. This includes the new initiative, Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere Grants (HOPE Grants), which is discussed in more detail in Section One, Part III of the Budget. The mortgage insurance activities of the Federal Housing Administration, including loan management and property disposition activities, are also included under this heading. Other activities included under this heading are the Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration, manufactured home inspection and monitoring, and the Nehemiah Housing Opportunities Grants Program.

Public and Indian housing programs cover public housing management and development activities (including modernization, drug elimination efforts, and resident management programs) and provision of Indian housing assistance. Also included are credit and financing activities related to development and modernization.

Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) covers the Department's programs to assist in the availability of mortgage credit and stabilize financing of selected types of mortgage loans. This heading also covers GNMA management and liquidating functions, and the guarantee of mortgage-backed securities.

Community planning and development covers the community development grant program authorized by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended. This organization is also responsible for the administration of the urban development action grant, rental rehabilitation grant and the urban homesteading programs as well as the rehabilitation loan (section 312) program, homeless grant programs, terminated categorical community development programs, and the revolving fund for liquidating programs.

Fair housing and equal opportunity includes the Fair Housing Assistance Program authorized by title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, as amended, and the Fair Housing Initiatives Program.

Policy development and research includes the policy development, economic analysis, program evaluation, and research activities of the Department.

Departmental Management includes the Department's Salaries and Expenses and the Inspector General accounts.

The subsidized housing schedule reflects an appropriation of $13.3 billion, the transfer of an estimated $70 million from the section 236 rental housing assistance fund and $87 million from the section 312 rehabilitation loan fund—for a total funding level of $13.4 billion.

The funds will be used for rental assistance for approximately 99,400 units and for amendments to existing contracts—including increases resulting from rental adjustments in compliance with "Rainier View" provisions in the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989. In addition, it is proposed that $17.5 million of Annual Contributions funds be transferred to the Research and Technology account to support program evaluation and monitoring activities.

Included within the total number of units proposed for this budget are 82,049 incremental units. This total is comprised of 6,967 units to assist the elderly or handicapped, 47,924 incremental vouchers, 8,003 incremental certificates and 1,305 single room occupancy units for the homeless. The Administration proposes to target these SRO units to homeless individuals who are chronically mentally ill or who are recovering substance abusers. Legislation will be proposed to require applicants to provide supportive services on a matching dollar-for-dollar basis for the ten year term of the SRO housing assistance. In addition, it is anticipated that approximately half of the 12,500 units proposed for prepayment and half of the 10,000 units included for property disposition will represent incremental assistance. The incremental total also includes 6,600 units to be made available under the Rental Housing Assistance for the Homeless Program.

No new development funding is being requested for either public or Indian housing. However, the total includes amounts for amendments to existing contracts and for lease adjustments. Funds for modernization activities are being requested under a separate appropriation for 1991.

A total of nearly 4,000 units of new construction and 3,000 units of leased housing is being proposed to assist the elderly and handicapped.

The Administration is proposing a new program initiative for 1991 called HOPE—Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere. Funding is being requested under Annual Contributions to support part of this HOPE initiative. Included within Annual Contributions are vouchers and certificates to assist the homeless, preserve low-income units and foster homeownership for low-income families.

In addition to 1991 funding for renewals and single room occupancy units, appropriation language is being proposed which will transfer obligated and unobligated balances from the renewal of expiring contracts and section 8 moderate rehabilitation accounts back into Annual Contributions. The 1990 Appropriations Act had included separate appropriations for these activities—resulting in the need for separate accounts. The Department feels that these activities can be properly monitored within the Annual Contributions account.

The budget also reflects proposals for equality between certificate and voucher fees and changes in the manner in which section 8 certificate rents are calculated. In addition, legislation is being proposed that would modify housing preservation provisions included in the Housing and Community Development (HCD) Act of 1987 and the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act of 1988. The legislative proposals also include a welfare rent and a homeownership component for the voucher program. In addition, the Administration anticipates a requirement that public housing agencies have an approved "Operation Bootstrap" plan in place before incremental vouchers or certificates can be received.

Lower-income housing (section 8).—The budget proposes the reservation of about 97,229 section 8 units. Included within this total are 4,797 elderly units, 9,403 certificates and 52,924 vouchers, 5,000 loan management units, 1,305 single room occupancy units for the homeless under the moderate rehabilitation program and 23,800 units for other purposes. Included, to augment the HOPE initiatives, there are 10,000 property disposition subsidies to be targeted for tenant organizations to stimulate homeownership. Should the amount being made available exceed the demand for homeownership units, appropriation language has been included to make these funds available for other activities.

The program being proposed for 1991 is aimed at addressing the Department's priorities. Additional incremental units are included to expand affordable rental housing opportunities. A three-part strategy to attack the problem of mortgage prepayment is proposed that will expand homeownership, offer incentives to project owners and provide assistance to residents affected by prepayment. Vouchers and certificates are being made available to facilitate public housing homeownership by providing for rental assistance to non-purchasing residents or replacement units for those lost as a result of purchase. In addition, funding will be provided for single room occupancy units for the homeless.

Housing for the handicapped (section 202).—The HCD Act of 1987 authorized, and the 1989 Appropriation Act funded, a new program for the handicapped—section 202(h). Although the program was funded in 1989 under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account, it is not linked to section 8 assistance as is the regular section 202 housing for the elderly or handicapped program. The budget proposes continuation of the section 8 assisted program in 1991 at a funding level of $518.8 million. This will support 4,797 units, including 1,700 leased units. The budget also includes $186.0 million under the new section 202(h) program in support of 2,170 units, including 1,000 units for the mentally ill homeless as part of the HOPE initiative. Legislation is being proposed which will permit the use of leased existing housing to serve the needs of the elderly, handicapped and chronically mentally ill. These leased units will require section 8 and section 202(h) rental subsidy assistance but will not require loan funding under the section 202 loan fund.

Public and Indian housing.—No new development funding is proposed for 1991 for either the public housing or Indian housing programs. A total of $57 million is requested for amendments to existing contracts and $25.1 million for lease adjustments. Funding for modernization activities amounting to $1.85 billion is being proposed for 1991 under a separate appropriation.

Rent supplement.— Rent supplement assistance payments will continue to be made on behalf of qualified low-income tenants in approximately 20,000 units which have not converted to section 8.

Section 235.—The Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983 (Public Law 98-181) authorized a restructured section 235 program based on a 10-year interest reduction subsidy. A total of $150 million of budget authority was provided in the Second Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-396) to fund the program. Recaptures of budget authority from terminations must be transferred into the Homeownership Assistance Fund account established pursuant to Public Law 98-181. Amounts deposited will be available for use to assist program beneficiaries still in need of assistance at the expiration of their present ten-year assistance contracts. Consistent with the provisions of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989, the Department is planning to refinance eligible section 235 mortgages bearing high interest rates.

Section 236.—The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, as amended, authorizes the section 236 Rental Housing Assistance Program which subsidizes the monthly mortgage payment that an owner of a rental or cooperative project is required to make. This interest subsidy reduces rents for lower income tenants.

College housing grants.—No new applications for grants have been approved since the program was terminated in 1973. Payments are made pursuant to the existing contracts.

Nehemiah housing opportunity grants program.—According to the terms of the authorizing legislation, the Nehemiah Housing Opportunity Grants program was to terminate after September 30, 1989. However, $24 million was made available for the program within the 1990 Appropriations Act, notwithstanding the sunset provision of the authorizing legislation. The $20 million unobligated balance from the 1989 appropriation, along with the 1990 appropriation, is being transferred to the Nehemiah revolving fund in 1990. No appropriation is being sought for 1991. In lieu of additional funding under this head, similar activities are proposed as eligible funding activities under HOPE Grants.

The Rental Housing Development Grant (HoDAG) program provides assistance to States and units of local government for the development of rental housing. Under language included in the Housing Act of 1987, the HoDAG program was terminated at the end of 1989. In conjunction with termination, language is proposed to repeal the program.

Legislation is being proposed in 1991 for the Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere Grants (HOPE Grants). The Budget requests an appropriation of $250 million. Under the proposal, grants will be used to convert public housing and distressed FHA multifamily properties to homeownership; and to assist non-profits with programs to sell vacant and foreclosed publicly-owned properties to low-income families.

States, localities, or non-profit organizations will be required to provide $1 for every $2 in Federal HOPE Grants.

HOPE Grants will be used for acquisition (where appropriate), rehabilitation, replacement reserves, operating reserves, counseling, and technical assistance.

The HOPE Grants appropriation includes $10 million to fund the services component of a new program of voucher assistance for the frail elderly. (The housing voucher component is displayed in the housing assistance account).

Also, $250 million of section 8 certificates and vouchers from the housing assistance account will be used to provide replacement housing and transitional assistance for public housing developments that convert to low-income homeownership.

In addition to the HOPE Grants program, HUD is proposing several other components of Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere, which are described elsewhere in the Budget.

Under the congregate services program the Department contracted directly with local public housing agencies and section 202 housing for the elderly or handicapped sponsors to supply support services, including meals and other services. These three- and five-year contracts commenced in 1980 and were evaluated over the life of the contracts. No additional resources are requested for 1991. This program did not achieve its primary goal, to prevent premature institutionalization of the elderly.

The Budget also proposes to transfer $2,000 of the Housing Counseling Assistance appropriation to the Research and Technology account to support program evaluation and monitoring activities. The Budget does not propose to extend the emergency homeownership counseling program.

Section 620 of the National Manufactured Housing Construction and Safety Standards Act of 1974, as amended, authorizes enforcement of appropriate construction standards for the construction, design and performance of manufactured homes to assure their quality, durability and safety. All manufactured homes produced since the standards took effect on June 15, 1976 must comply with Federal construction and safety standards. The States are actively encouraged to participate in the program under compliance plans approved by HUD.

A fee is charged to the manufacturers for each manufactured home produced to cover the costs of the monitoring and enforcement activities by HUD contract agents. Fees are deposited in a special fund administered by the Department, and a portion of the fee receipts are transferred to the salaries and expenses account to defray the direct administrative expenses of the program.

The Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act provides protection to the public with respect to purchases or leases of subdivision lots. Statements of record must be filed with the Secretary before subdivisions with 100 or more lots may be sold in interstate commerce, except when the subdivision is eligible for exemption.

The Secretary is authorized to charge a fee, to be paid by the developer when filing a statement of record. The fee receipts are permanently appropriated and have helped finance a portion of the direct administrative expenses incurred in program operations.

[1] Includes the transfer of the GI and SRI Fund Guaranteed Loan balances to a new account.

The Federal Housing Administration (FHA) fund consists of four separate funds. Financial data for each individual fund is maintained for control and reporting purposes. The Department is proposing to split the Federal Housing Administration Fund into two separate accounts beginning in 1991. The existing account will be renamed and will include the Mutual Mortgage Insurance (MMI) and Cooperative Management Housing Insurance (CMHI) Funds. The new account will be comprised of the General Insurance (GI) and Special Risk Insurance (SRI) Funds. The new account structure will present more clearly the operations of the various funds.

The Mutual mortgage insurance fund provides for the Department's basic single family mortgage insurance program. It is a mutual fund where mortgagors, upon termination of their mortgages, share surplus premiums paid into the fund that are not required for operating expenses or losses.

The Cooperative management housing insurance fund, also a mutual fund, provides mortgage insurance for management-type cooperatives authorized by section 213 of the National Housing Act, as amended.

Losses connected with defaulted notes, assigned mortgages and acquired properties are charged to the appropriate insurance fund. During 1991, it is estimated that applications for single-family and multifamily mortgage insurance covering 1,206,367 units will be received and that mortgage insurance will be written covering 909,636 single-family and multifamily units. In addition, it is estimated that approximately 101,306 single-family and multifamily units will be acquired by the Department during 1991 and that 98,967 single-family and multifamily units will be sold. More detailed activity information follows in the "Program Highlights" table shown below. The highlights table reflects the consolidated activity of all FHA Insurance Funds.

Insurance reserves from operations at the end of 1991 are estimated to be in a surplus position for the Mutual mortgage insurance and Cooperative management housing insurance funds, but in a deficit status of about $12.1 billion for the GI and SRI Funds. The status of estimated insurance reserves from operations (retained income or deficit) through 1991 is as follows:

During 1990 the Department began implementing several initiatives designed to improve operating results, to tighten administrative controls and to address abusive practices in the mortgage insurance programs. The FHA reform initiatives, many of which are outlined in the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989 (Public Law 101-235) enacted on December 15, 1989, are expected to lead to more efficient operation of the FHA insurance programs.

The 1991 Budget is based on the assumption that the enacted fiscal year 1990 FHA mortgage limits will be continued in 1991 and beyond. The Budget also expects this extension would be enacted through a permanent change in the authorizing statute rather than through a one-time change in appropriations language. The continuation of losses projected in this budget demonstrates the need for additional changes to assure the financial solvency of FHA's single-family program. Once actuarial studies of the funds are completed, the Administration anticipates submitting specific proposals to address these long-term financial problems.

Part of the Administration's principal objectives are to expand homeownership opportunities and to work toward ending the tragedy of homelessness. During 1990 and 1991, HUD will make available acquired single-family properties for Urban Homesteading purposes and for assistance to homeless families. FHA acquired multifamily properties will be utilized for homeownership under the HOPE initiative.

For 1991, a new Temporary mortgage assistance payments program is being implemented that is designed to prevent precipitous foreclosure by helping insured homeowners who have experienced temporary financial reverses and cannot make their full monthly mortgage payments. This new program is viewed as a viable alternative to the Home mortgage assignment program currently being carried out by the Department and will assist in the effort to minimize insurance claims against the FHA fund.

Operating expenses.—Funds are paid directly into a consolidated account, Salaries and expenses, Department of Housing and Urban Development, for administrative expenses based on workload related to programs financed from the FHA fund.

Financial Condition.—The following tables reflect the revenues and financial condition of the FHA funds based on Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP). The 1989 financial statements are considered preliminary pending completion of the annual audit.

The General insurance fund provides for a large number of specialized mortgage insurance programs, including the insurance of loans for property improvements as well as for cooperatives, condominiums, housing for the elderly, land development, group practice medical facilities and nonprofit hospitals.

The Special risk insurance fund provides mortgage insurance on behalf of mortgagors eligible for interest reduction payments who otherwise would not be eligible for mortgage insurance. In addition, the fund provides insurance on mortgages covering experimental housing where strict adherence to State or local building regulations is not observed. Also provided is insurance for high-risk mortgagors who normally would not be eligible for mortgage insurance.

Budget program.—The budget proposes an appropriation of $317 million to restore the net realized losses from the sale of property and notes covered by the General and Special risk insurance funds. The budget includes an initiative to offer a cash settlement to mortgagees to prevent claims on current mortgages eligible for assignment under section 221(g)(4) of the National Housing Act.

Operating expenses.—Funds are paid directly into a consolidated account, Salaries and Expenses, for administrative expenses based on workload related to programs financed from these FHA funds.

Note.—Amounts for direct loan obligations reflect reservations of section 202 funds. Loan obligations shown under the program and financing schedule reflect loans that have reached the initial closing stage of processing.

The housing for the elderly or handicapped fund was established pursuant to section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959, as amended. The fund provides direct loans to nonprofit organizations building and managing housing projects for lower income persons who are elderly or handicapped.

Projects must include an assured range of necessary services for the occupants of such projects. In addition, the section 8 lower income housing assistance payments program is used in conjunction with the section 202 program. Applications under the two programs are processed simultaneously.

The Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 authorized, and the 1989 Appropriation Act funded, a new program under section 202 to specifically address the needs of the handicapped. Although the program was funded under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account, the new program is not linked to section 8 assistance.

The 1991 Budget proposes a loan limitation of $282.5 million to support nearly 4,000 units of new construction and $75 million of amendments to prior year commitments. In addition, the Department is proposing legislation to permit leasing of 3,000 units of existing housing for the elderly and handicapped, utilizing rental assistance resources requested under the Annual Contributions account.

Within the 3,000 unit total, as part of the Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere (HOPE) initiative, the Budget proposes approximately 1,000 units for the chronically mentally ill homeless. States, units of local government, and Indian tribes may apply for these units. Applicants will be required to match the housing assistance with supportive services to provide comprehensive assistance for these segments of the homeless population.

The program and financing schedule for this account summarizes the Federal government's obligations for this program. The amounts reflected in the following summary of administrative commitments reflect outstanding section 202 fund reservations, whereas, the obligations portion of the program and financing schedule reflects commitments which have reached the initial loan closing stage of processing.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized the Secretary to establish a revolving fund into which rental collections in excess of the established basic rents for units in section 236 subsidized projects would be deposited.

The Housing and Community Development Amendment of 1978 authorized the Secretary, subject to approval in appropriation acts, to transfer excess rent collections received after 1978 to the Troubled projects operating subsidy program, renamed the Flexible Subsidy Fund. Prior to that time, collections were used for paying tax and utility increases in section 236 projects. The Housing and Community Development Act of 1980 amended the 1978 Act by authorizing the transfer of excess rent collections regardless of when collected.

This Budget assumes that the Flexible Subsidy Fund will receive no further resources from the Rental Housing Assistance Fund beginning in 1991. Commencing in 1991, excess rental collections in this fund are proposed to be transferred to the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing program to partly offset the costs of providing an additional 10,000 subsidies for use by tenant organizations for homeownership opportunities in FHA-acquired properties. These vouchers will augment the HOPE grant homeownership program.

The Flexible Subsidy Fund, formerly the Troubled Projects Operating Subsidy Program, assists financially troubled subsidized projects under certain FHA authorities. The subsidies are intended to prevent potential losses to the FHA fund resulting from project insolvency and to preserve these projects as a viable source of housing for low- and moderate-income tenants.

Funding is provided for essential repairs to correct deficiencies resulting from deferred maintenance and for major capital improvements. During 1991, unobligated balances will be used to operate the program. Interest income and loan repayments to the Flexible Subsidy Fund (estimated at $3 million) are proposed to be returned to the Treasury.

The program and financing schedule for this account summarizes the Federal Government's obligations for this program. The amounts shown in the following summary of administrative commitments reflects outstanding uncontracted reservations of flexible subsidy loans. The obligations portion of the program and financing schedule reflects formally executed loans.

The Nonprofit sponsor assistance fund provides interest-free loans to nonprofit organizations to plan housing projects to be financed under the section 202 housing for the elderly or handicapped program. To ensure a sufficient commitment by the sponsor to the proposed project, the fund will only finance up to 80 percent of the start-up costs through these "seed money" loans. Sponsors are required to demonstrate their financial capacity by providing 20 percent from their own funds which is repaid from the initial proceeds of the section 202 construction loan. Loans may not exceed $50,000. The Budget proposes a loan limitation of $530,000 for this program in 1991.

It provides for the receipt of recaptures of budget authority, cash, and interest earnings under the restructured section 235 program. The funds are authorized to be used, to the extent approved in Appropriation Acts, by the Secretary to provide additional section 235 assistance payments for mortgagors who are unable to assume the full payment due under the mortgage after the termination of the original 10-year assistance payments contract.

The Nehemiah grants program was authorized by the HCD Act of 1987 and funded in 1989 and 1990 under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account. The legislation authorizes a revolving fund into which are deposited appropriated funds. This program and financing schedule indicates the unobligated balance from 1989 and the appropriation from 1990 as being transferred from the Annual Contributions account to the revolving fund.

The program provides loans to eligible families to assist in the purchase of new or substantially rehabilitated units. The purpose of the program was: (1) to encourage homeownership by families not otherwise able to afford homeownership; (2) to undertake a concentrated effort to rebuild the depressed areas of the cities and to create sound and attractive neighborhoods; and (3) to increase the employment of neighborhood residents. No separate program is being proposed for 1991. Activities eligible under the Nehemiah Program are being included in the new HOPE program.

Operating subsidy payments are provided to assist local Public Housing Agencies (PHAs) and Indian Housing Authorities (IHAs) to meet certain deficits in the operation of PHA-owned and IHA-owned low-income housing. These payments are in addition to the debt service and capital funding provided by HUD for development and modernization of low-income housing.

Although funding is included in this account for drug prevention in 1990, this budget proposes a separate appropriation for this purpose starting in 1991.

The operating subsidy estimates for 1991 are based primarily upon the Performance Funding System (PFS) formula, but include projected savings resulting from improved tenant income verification procedures, and other actions.

MODERNIZATION OF LOW-INCOME HOUSING PROJECTS

Modernization funds enable Public Housing Agencies (PHAs) and Indian Housing Authorities (IHAs) to correct physical and management deficiencies in existing projects and achieve operating efficiency and economy. Funding for modernization activities through 1990 is included in the "Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing" appropriation. However, this budget proposes a separate appropriation for modernization starting in 1991. The 1991 estimate includes up to $5 million for public housing resident management technical assistance and training subject to enactment of authorizing legislation which would continue the program in 1991. Also, under legislation being proposed, $150 million of the $1.85 billion being requested for 1991 would be allocated to States providing matching funds. The table below presents the level of modernization funding activity for the period 1989–1991. The amounts shown for 1989 and 1990 represent funding provided under the Annual Contributions account for modernization activities.

Drug elimination grants are provided to public housing agencies (PHAs) and Indian housing authorities (IHAs) to promote safe and decent housing communities by ridding PHAs and IHAs of drugs and drug-related crime. Funding for drug elimination grants are included in "Payments for Operating of Low-Income Housing Projects" appropriation in both 1989 and 1990 and in the "Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing" appropriation in 1990. This Budget proposes a separate appropriation for drug elimination grants starting in 1991.

The Budget also proposes to transfer $202 thousand of the 1991 drug elimination grant funding to the research and technology account to support program evaluation and monitoring

The Low-Rent Public Housing Loan Fund is used to provide direct Federal loans to fund remaining Public Housing Agency (PHA) and Indian Housing Authority (IHA) construction, acquisition, and modernization activities reserved under the Annual Contributions appropriation through 1986. These loans are made from available resources of this fund and from borrowings from the Treasury. Under legislation enacted during 1986 (Public Law 99-272), the borrowings from the Treasury are forgiven at the end of each fiscal year and the loans to PHAs/IHAs are forgiven as construction, acquisition, and modernization activities are completed. Under the provisions of this legislation, $600 million of borrowings from the Treasury were forgiven in 1989, an estimated $400 million will be borrowed from the Treasury and forgiven in 1990 and an estimated $200 million will be borrowed from the Treasury and forgiven in 1991. The table below shows the status of outstanding loans for the period 1989–1991. The $21 million balance at the end of each year represents administrative loans, preliminary loans on projects never undertaken and excess financing.

Public enterprise funds:

LOANS TO FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

The Treasury is authorized to make up to $2.25 billion of loans to the Federal National Mortgage Association. Such loans were made in the first few months of the Association's existence as a private corporation while it arranged lines of credit with commercial banks. No loans have been made since that time and the loan authority will be used only in emergency situations.

The Association is required to manage and liquidate its initial mortgage portfolio and other mortgages, loans or obligations. Liquidation of the portfolio is accomplished through regular principal repayments according to their amortization schedules, by sales of mortgages when they can be absorbed by private investors without disruption of normal market conditions and through principal credits arising from prepayments and foreclosures.

The fund's initial portfolio consisted of mortgages on hand, or purchased under contracts made before November 1, 1954. Certain additional mortgages, loans, and other obligations may be acquired for this portfolio from the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. Residential housing mortgages may also be acquired from any Federal instrumentality.

Budget program.—Congress approved appropriation language included in the 1985 Budget that: (1) forgave all outstanding Treasury borrowing issued under the Special Assistance Functions Fund and Emergency Mortgage Purchase Assistance Fund and (2) transferred all remaining assets and liabilities of these funds to the Management and Liquidating Functions Fund.

The last remaining mortgage commitments were purchased in 1988. The remaining $34 million in mortgages were sold in 1989, leaving an investment portfolio of FHA debentures that were acquired through mortgage foreclosures. However, due to a court order, GNMA is required to reinstate a section 221(d)(3) mortgage that had prepaid. This is expected to take place in 1990. GNMA does not foresee having to reinstate any additional prior mortgages that had either been sold or prepaid. Because of a change in budget scorekeeping procedures, the proceeds from sales of GNMA-held loans with Government mortgage insurance are treated as borrowing from the public rather than offsetting collections. As a result, budget authority is scored to reflect this borrowing.

Financing.—These functions are financed principally by portfolio liquidations and by interest earned on FHA debentures.

Operating results.—Net income of $2.9 million and $4.4 million are estimated for 1990 and 1991, respectively.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) to guarantee the timely payment of principal and interest on trust certificates or other securities issued by any financial institution approved for this purpose, and based on and backed by a trust or pool of FHA-insured, FmHA-insured, or VA-guaranteed mortgages.

GNMA guarantees the timely payment of principal and interest on the guaranteed securities. Actual claim losses for 1989 and estimated losses for 1990 and 1991 are presented below.

Project pools	14,817	12,382	5,267
Total	48,185	117,331	52,212

Budget program.—Program activity is summarized in the following table:

[In thousands of dollars]

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Commitments issued	55,117,655	74,535,009	79,833,979
Guarantees issued	55,314,090	62,112,508	66,528,316
Securities outstanding	361,290,794	390,109,830	417,278,996

Financing.—In addition to an application fee, guarantee fees and other charges are assessed issuers of guaranteed securities to cover costs incurred by GNMA in connection with the guarantees and to establish a reserve against possible future payments of claims under the guarantee.

Operating results.—Fee collections and other income are expected to exceed expenses by $74 million and $280 million in 1990 and 1991, respectively. These amounts will be retained to cover future year expenses and as a reserve against losses that may be incurred on guarantees.

The administration is proposing to increase the fee paid to the government by GNMA issuers of mortgage-backed securities from 6 basis points to 10 basis points in 1991. The fee increase would increase GNMA's reserves to offset the future costs associated with VA single family defaults and potential FHA single family reform that could place GNMA at additional risk.

The 1991 Budget also proposes legislation that would impose on certain government sponsored enterprises a fee on new debt and securities issued after September 30, 1990.

At the end of 1989, GNMA had a combined mortgage servicing portfolio of approximately $12 billion because of issuer defaults. GNMA estimates that it will take over the issuer responsibility of an additional $16.2 billion in mortgage servicing between 1990 and 1995. GNMA will minimize its losses on mobile home and VA no-bid foreclosures through an aggressive sales program. FHA or VA will accept assignment or will foreclose on all other defaulted mortgages. Losses from the above portfolios are expected to reach $610 million with the majority of the losses being incurred in 1990 through 1992. Even taking into consideration the above portfolio losses, GNMA estimates net income in 1990 and beyond.

The National Housing Act, as amended, authorized the Association to create trusts to facilitate the financing of mortgages and other loan obligations owned by Government agencies. Under this authority, participations in the interest and principal collections on pooled loan obligations pledged by various trustor agencies were sold to private investors.

All remaining outstanding certificates were redeemed in 1988. After satisfying outstanding administrative obligations in 1989, the Fund was terminated.

Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, authorizes the Secretary to make grants to units of general local government and States to fund local community development programs.

Funds are distributed to eligible entitlement applicants using the higher of two objective formulas. Funds are allocated between metropolitan cities and urban counties and States and small cities.

Beginning in 1991, Indian tribes also will be eligible for funding on an entitlement basis. The recently enacted "Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989" authorizes this change. The 1989 Act also amends section 107 of the 1974 Act to create a new program of "Special Purpose Grants", replacing the previously authorized Secretary's Discretionary Fund. The 1989 Act is an important part of the Department's commitment to reform and improve program operations.

Guaranteed loans.—Guaranteed loan assistance under section 108 was provided to eligible communities to finance acquisition of real property, rehabilitation of publicly owned real property, and certain related expenses. In the past the Federal Financing Bank financed these guaranteed loans. The Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 requires private financing of all loan guarantees committed after July 1, 1986. FFB will continue disbursing loans for commitments approved prior to July 1, 1986. No guarantee commitments are proposed for 1991, and legislation is being proposed to repeal section 108.

Budget program.—An appropriation of $2,756 million is proposed for 1991. Grant outlays are estimated at $3.1 billion in 1990 and in 1991.

In 1991, the Department proposes to continue funding a $5 million public housing child care demonstration as authorized by section 222 of the Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983.

The Budget also proposes to transfer $3,735 thousand of the Community Development Grants appropriation to the Research and Technology account to support program evaluation and monitoring activities.

Urban Development Action Grants *

* See "Detailed Budget Estimates," Subpart B, for additional information.

Of amounts previously appropriated for urban development action grants authorized in sections 119 and 103 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended (42 U.S.C. 5301), unobligated balances (including amounts deobligated in fiscal year 1991) are rescinded, except such amounts as are required to fund projects which have received preliminary approval in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Budget proposes a rescission of all 1991 unobligated funds. The estimated rescission is $10 million. Legislation to repeal the Urban Development Action Grants program, section 119 of the 1974 Act, will be proposed.

The Budget also proposes the transfer of approximately $11.5 million in 1990 of unobligated funds to the Urban Homesteading program. (See "Detailed Budget Estimates", Subpart B.)

This program is authorized under section 17(a)(1)(A) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended by section 301 of the Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983 (Public Law 98-181). Rental Rehabilitation grants have been made to States, urban counties, and cities with populations in excess of 50,000 to help support the rehabilitation of privately owned rental housing. Legislation will be proposed to restructure the program to make funds available only within "Housing Opportunity Zones" in support of the Department's "Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere (HOPE)" initiative, beginning in 1991.

Funding for this program before 1989 was provided under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account. A separate appropriation, independent of the Assisted Housing account, was provided beginning in 1989. An appropriation of $70 million, together with estimated recaptures of $20 million will provide a 1991 program level of approximately $90 million. The Budget also proposes to transfer $95 thousand of the Rental Rehabilitation Grants appropriation to the Research and Technology account to support program evaluation and monitoring activities.

For purposes of comparison, the table below presents data for the entire program, including that resulting from appropriations under the Assisted Housing account.

Section 810 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, authorizes the Secretary of HUD to transfer one- to four-unit HUD-owned properties, without payment, to units of local government for use in an urban homesteading program. In addition, the Act authorizes the Secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Resolution Trust Corporation to transfer their unoccupied, single family properties for use in such programs.

Budget program.—An appropriation of $50 million is proposed for 1991 which will support the transfer of an estimated 2,780 single family properties.

The Budget proposes to transfer $47 thousand of the Urban Homesteading appropriation to the Research and Technology account to support program evaluation and monitoring activities.

The Budget also proposes to transfer approximately $11.5 million from the Urban Development Action Grants account to the Urban Homesteading program in 1990. These funds will be used only for transferring FHA properties to local governments. (See "Detailed Budget Estimates", Subpart B.)

Reagan, 82 Civ. 2231–CSH, dated March 20, 1985, shall be withdrawn, pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 1555 et seq.

Title V of the Energy Security Act of 1980 authorized the creation of the Solar Energy and Energy Conservation Bank to encourage energy conservation and the use of solar energy. It has provided funds to subsidize loans and grants for the installation of energy conservation and solar energy improvements in single and multifamily residences, and agricultural and commercial buildings.

Pursuant to court order in the case of Dabney versus Reagan, the Department is required to make available for reuse each year deobligated funds recaptured from certain prior year appropriations. Because the amounts involved are very small (estimated at only $100 thousand in 1990), it is difficult for the States to operate effective programs. Therefore, legislation is proposed to withdraw from use permanently any such future recaptured funds.

The Solar Bank was extinguished by operation of law on March 15, 1988.

Title IV, subtitle B, of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100–77), authorizes the Secretary to make Emergency Shelter Grants to States, units of local government, and nonprofit organizations to provide emergency shelter and other support for the homeless. An appropriation of $71.3 million is requested for this account in 1991. Title IV, subtitle C, of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100-77) authorizes assistance to deinstitutionalized homeless individuals, homeless families with children, homeless individuals with mental disabilities and other homeless persons. Such assistance is available for the acquisition and rehabilitation of structures to be used for the homeless as well as to pay a portion of annual operating costs. Additionally, legislation will be proposed to allow the use of $20 million of the amount appropriated in 1991 for a new initiative to assist homeless families under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program living in temporary shelters, especially those living in "welfare hotels." This demonstration program will test innovative approaches to moving these families out of their emergency shelter accommodations into more stable transitional housing arrangements. The goal of this initiative is to develop successful models for helping these families to become independent and self-supporting.

The Budget also proposes to transfer $193 thousand of amounts appropriated for the Transitional and supportive housing program in 1991 to the Research and technology ac-

Title IV, subtitle D, of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100–77), authorizes HUD to provide comprehensive assistance for particularly innovative programs or alternative methods of meeting the immediate and long-term needs of the homeless. Funding is also available to supplement assistance provided under the Transitional and supportive housing demonstration program and the Emergency shelter grants program to help meet the needs of special population groups among the homeless and to put underutilized public buildings to use assisting the homeless.

The requested $161 million will be used to provide assistance for the homeless who are seriously mentally ill or recovering substance abusers. Part of the Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere (HOPE), these funds will assist approximately 6,600 homeless individuals for five-year periods. Funds will be awarded on a competitive basis to States, units of general local government, or Indian tribes who offer innovative approaches to providing comprehensive assistance for these populations among the homeless. Applicants will be required to match the funds received under this program on a dollar-for-dollar basis with supportive services funding from Federal, State, local, or private sources. Grantees must assure that the supportive services are funded from sources other than subtitle D of the McKinney Act and are available for the five-year term of the housing assistance. Additional authorizing legislation will be proposed to conduct this initiative.

The Budget also proposes to transfer $218 thousand of this appropriation to the Research and technology account to support program evaluation and monitoring activities.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1970 directs the Secretary to undertake programs of research, studies, testing, and demonstrations related to the HUD mission. These functions are carried out internally and through contracts with industry, nonprofit research organizations, and educational institutions, and through agreements with State and local governments and other Federal agencies.

In 1991, the research program will continue to emphasize the improvement of the operation of the Department's programs. In addition, the Budget proposes transferring $25 million from selected accounts to this account to support increased funding for program evaluation and monitoring capabilities. This proposal is an integral part of the Department's reform commitment.

Fire management and presuppression.—Provides on a discretionary basis for management, program planning, and presuppression costs for the Department's fire program. The program management subactivity includes all permanent, full-time staff; automatic detection and other systems; communications; fire prevention, training and interagency coordination. Presuppression includes activities associated with preparing for the annual fire season, (e.g. hiring seasonal firefighters, purchasing equipment and O&C fire protection), and with reducing hazardous conditions (including costs of eliminating unnatural or hazardous levels of accumulated fuel, either by controlled fire or other means).

Emergency operations.—Provides on a mandatory basis for the emergency and unpredictable aspects of the Department's firefighting programs: wildfire suppression and emergency rehabilitation. Suppression includes the costs of emergency suppression of wildfires or for escalated presuppression funding based on abnormally extreme fire potential, and of monitoring natural fires permitted to burn within preestablished fire prescription criteria. Emergency rehabilitation includes the costs incurred to prevent land degradation, resource losses, and other situations caused by damage by fire, e.g. reseeding felling damaged trees, etc. Emergency rehabilitation costs for any one fire shall not exceed three years or two full growing seasons.

State regulatory program grants.—This program activity is to provide grants to States for the operation of permanent enforcement programs under the terms of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 (the Act). As of September 30, 1989, 24 States with actual or planned coal mining facilities had approved State programs.

Federal regulatory programs.—This activity includes programs for Federal oversight of State permanent regulatory programs, for monitoring State inspection and enforcement, for the provision of technical assistance to States, for the assessment and collection of civil penalties imposed pursuant to the Act, and for the administration of the Federal regulatory program in States without approved permanent enforcement programs. In addition, it also includes funding for the Office of Surface Mining (OSM) to perform reclamation in cases where performance bonds have been forfeited and OSM is the regulatory authority, and funding derived from collections of civil penalties pursuant to the Act, which is used by OSM and the States for reclamation projects.

General administration.—This activity includes: the Offices of the Director and Deputy Directors; the Headquarters staffs for Public Affairs, Equal Employment Opportunity, Congressional Liaison, Information Systems Management, and Regulatory Development and Issues Management; and the Divisions of Planning, Budget and Management Analysis; Financial Management; Personnel; and Management Services. This activity represents only that portion of the total General Administration expenses attributable to the Regulation and Technology appropriation. The remainder has been requested from the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund.

State reclamation program grants.—Each State and Tribe with an approved reclamation program is entitled, subject to appropriation, to receive 50 percent of Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund revenues derived from operating mines in that State or Tribal Land. With grants, States and Tribes assume primary responsibility for addressing problems such as subsidence, underground fires, open shafts, and acid drainage in accordance with priorities set forth in the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 (the Act).

Federal reclamation programs.—This activity includes fee collection, and assistance to States in developing reclamation programs, abandoned mine lands reclamation projects undertaken directly by the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement and the Rural Abandoned Mine Program (RAMP) administered by the Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service.

Small operator assistance payments.—This activity provides for payments for authorized services to eligible coal mine operators in preparing applications for mining permits under a permanent State or Federal regulatory program. These services include determining the probable hydrologic consequences of the proposed mining operation and analysis of test borings or core samples.

General administration.—This activity includes the offices described for the General Administration activity in the Regulation and Technology appropriation. The funds for this activity represent only that portion of general administration expenses attributable to the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund.

Funds are provided to continue construction on two projects. This funding will provide improvements to existing systems by rehabilitating pumping plants, canal and lateral structures, enlarging and extending drains, and enable the purchase of maintenance equipment.

Under the Distribution Systems Loans Act (43 U.S.C. 421a–421d), loans can be made to organizations for the construction of irrigation and municipal or industrial water distribution systems on authorized Federal reclamation projects. No loans of this type are funded in 1991.

The Geological Survey provides basic scientific data and information concerning water, land, and mineral resources. Funding for 1991 emphasizes global-climate change and water-quality research, and the continued development of advanced cartographic systems (ACS).

National mapping, geography, and surveys.—The national mapping program produces and makes available, in printed and digital format, cartographic and geographic base data, multipurpose and special-purpose maps. Map receipts are retained for map printing and distribution.

Geologic and mineral resource surveys and mapping.—The national program of onshore and offshore geologic research and investigations produces: (1) improved methods and instruments for mineral and energy assessments; (2) geologic, geophysical, and geochemical maps and analyses; (3) information on the chemistry and physics of the Earth, the climate, and the geologic processes by which it was formed and is being modified; (4) information on geologic hazards; and (5) information for use by other Federal and State agencies in the management of public lands and in national policy determinations.

Water resources investigations.—The national program of water resources investigations has the objective of appraising the Nation's water resources and ensuring that the data necessary to develop and manage them efficiently and effectively are available when needed. The program produces data and analyses to support decisions on water planning, water management, water quality, energy development, and enhancement of the quality of the environment.

General administration.—General administrative expenses provide for management, executive direction and coordination, and administrative support.

Facilities.—This activity finances the operation and maintenance, facilities management, and special support services for the operation of the national center headquarters and field centers.

Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are from States and municipalities for cooperative efforts and proceeds from sale to the public of copies of photographs and records; proceeds from sale of personal property; reimbursements from permittees and licensees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission; and reimbursements from friendly countries and international organizations for technical assistance. Reimbursements from other Federal agencies are for mission related work performed at the request of the financing agency.

The Geological Survey has 15 quarters located at geomagnetic or seismic observatories. The operation and maintenance of these quarters, in the past, have been funded out of rental receipts which were credited to the Survey's annual SIR account. Under the provisions of Public Law 98-473, this account was established to receive rental receipts to remain available until expended for operation and maintenance of these quarters.

Information and analysis.—This program provides a reliable data base for analysis of national minerals problems by collecting, interpreting, and disseminating worldwide information relating to the production, consumption, and availability of nonfuel minerals. The program maintains information on the production and consumption of approximately 100 mineral commodities, and also on the minerals-related industries of about 168 countries. Indepth economic, technical, and policy studies that address the worldwide supply and demand for nonfuel minerals are conducted in this program. The Minerals Availability System, a computerized data base system, develops and utilizes methodologies for evaluation of mineral deposits based on quantifiable technical, economic, and social data. The program also includes mineral land assessments on certain Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Forest Service lands, carried out jointly with the U.S. Geological Survey.

Research.—

Health, safety and mining technology.—This program focuses on long-term, high risk research designed to improve all aspects of the health and safety of miners, including prevention of occupational illnesses, accidents, and disasters, as well as innovations. Research is being concentrated on new concepts that promise revolutionary improvements in health and safety, reduced environmental impacts, increased access to marginal mineral deposits, increasing the domestic mineral reserve base, and increased productivity, including major efforts in automation, robotics, and innovative mining systems.

Minerals and materials science.—Research is conducted to develop basic information on fundamental scientific and engineering principles of minerals processing that will enhance the mineral industry's efforts to investigate new or alternative techniques which increase production and substitution of strategic, critical, and other essential minerals.

Environmental technology.—Research is conducted to mitigate or eliminate adverse environmental impacts associated with mining and mineral processing. Problems addressed include subsidence, acid mine drainage, and neutralization of waste materials.

Mineral institutes.—Minerals research and engineering programs conducted at 32 colleges and universities nationwide are supported through public and private resources.

General administration.—The program supports executive direction, and financial and management services for the Bureau of Mines.

The Helium Act Amendments of 1960, Public Law 86–777 (50 U.S.C. 167), authorized activities necessary to provide sufficient helium to meet the current and foreseeable future needs of essential government activities. The program includes production, conservation, sale, and distribution of helium and involves the management of helium program facilities and resources to:

(a) Provide helium to meet current demands of all Federal agencies.

(b) Provide helium to meet the foreseeable future helium requirements of essential Government programs.

(c) Conduct investigations and evaluations to improve the helium program.

The Administration proposes to amend the Helium Act Amendments of 1960, Public Law 86-777 (50 U.S.C. 167) to include selling the helium program assets, except for the helium inventory and to permit federal government users to purchase helium from the private sector. The Legislation to implement this proposal was transmitted to the Congress by the Secretary on March 22, 1989 and has been introduced as H.R. 2541. As part of this proposal, H.R. 2541 would cancel the outstanding debt which will remain after revenues from the sale of the assets have been applied to the debt.

Fish and wildlife enhancement.—The Service conducts investigations and provides technical assistance to prevent or minimize adverse environmental effects of development projects. Contaminants are monitored and assessed. Activities are pursued to prevent species from becoming extinct, and return them to the point where they are neither threatened or endangered.

Refuges and wildlife.—The Service maintains the National Wildlife Refuge System consisting of 452 units, with waterfowl production areas in 150 counties and 55 coordination areas, totalling about 90.8 million acres; directs and coordinates national migratory bird programs; and enforces Federal wildlife laws and regulations.

Fisheries.—The Service participates in development, management, and protection of interstate and international fishery resources, and provides technical assistance related to fish, wildlife and some marine mammals.

Research and development.—The Service conducts research to improve wildlife management capabilities, improve sport fish productivity, protect endangered or threatened species, assist recovery programs, and prevent or minimize adverse impacts on fish and wildlife.

Funds deposited into this account include direct appropriations and fines, penalties and forfeitures collected under the authority of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act (16 U.S.C. 707) and interest on obligations held in the Federal Aid to Wildlife Restoration Fund. The funding for the North American Wetlands Conservation Fund is authorized by the North American Wetlands Conservation Act, Public Law 101-233. The Act establishes the North American Wetlands Conservation Council which recommends wetlands conservation projects for the approval of the Migratory Bird Conservation Commission. These projects help fulfill the habitat protection, restoration and enhancement goals of the North American Waterfowl Management Plan, the Act and the Tripartite Agreement among Mexico, Canada and the United States; may involve partnerships with public agencies, and private entities, with non-Federal matching of Federal contributions of funding; provide for the long-term conservation of habitat for migratory birds and other fish and wildlife, including species that are listed, or are candidates to be listed, under the Endangered Species Act, (16 U.S.C. 1531). Wetlands conservation projects include the obtaining of a real property interest in lands or waters, including water rights; the restoration, management or enhancement of habitat; and training and development for conservation management in Mexico. Funding may be provided for assistance for wetlands conservation projects in Canada or Mexico.

[1] Guarantees canceled.

The fund was established pursuant to the Indian Financing Act of 1974 as amended in 1984 and 1988. The purpose of the fund is to support a program of guaranteeing or insuring loans made by commercial lending institutions to Indian tribes and organizations, and individual Indians and Alaska Natives for economic development purposes. An interest subsidy is paid from the fund on loans guaranteed or insured to reduce the Indian borrower's rate of interest. The purpose of this program is to provide an incentive to the private lending sector to make loans to Indians which would not otherwise be made.

Beginning in 1991, the fund will also guarantee up to 10 percent of a surety bond issued by the Small Business Administration (SBA). The SBA will guarantee up to 90 percent of the losses sustained by a surety company as a result of the issuance of a bid, payment, and/or performance bond to an Indian small business concern. A premium fee paid by the surety will help offset projected losses on the bonds. Funds are requested in 1991 to cover losses on these bonds.

Under the terms of the 1947 Trusteeship Agreement between the United States and the Security Council of the United Nations, the United States exercises full jurisdiction over the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands and is obligated to promote the political, economic, and educational advancement of the inhabitants. These responsibilities are carried out through the Department of the Interior.

The Trusteeship Agreement is no longer in effect with respect to the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia. Their assistance is discussed in the "Compact of Free Association" account. The United States has approved a Compact with the Republic of Palau, but that Compact has not been ratified by Palau consistent with the requirements of the Palau constitution, and has, therefore, not been implemented. Funding included in the "Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands" account represents assistance for the Republic of Palau, and remaining transition responsibilities of the United States from the Trusteeship administration.

COMPACT OF FREE ASSOCIATION

For economic assistance and necessary expenses for the Federated States of Micronesia [and], the Republic of the Marshall Islands, and the Republic of Palau as provided for in sections 122, 221, 223, 232, and 233 of the Compacts of Free Association, [$23,260,000] $19,200,000, to remain available until expended, as authorized by Public Law 99-239[;], Public Law 99-658, and Public Law 101-219: Provided, That [notwithstanding the provisions of Public Laws 99-500 and 99-591,] the effective date of the Palau Compact for purposes of economic assistance pursuant to the Palau Compact of Free Association, Public Law 99-658, shall be the effective date of the Palau Compact as determined pursuant to section [101(d) of Public Law 99-658] *101 of Public Law 101-219. The peoples of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia approved Compacts of Free Association negotiated by the United States and their governments. The Compact of Free Association Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-239) constituted the necessary authorizing legislation to make annual payments to the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia, which began in fiscal year 1987 and will continue for fifteen years, totalling $2.3 billion, to aid in the development of these freely associated states as sovereign nations. Public Law 99-658 provided the necessary authorizing legislation for the Republic of Palau Compact. That Compact, when implemented, will provide annual payments that will total $450 million over a fifteen-year period.

The United States Parole Commission makes decisions to grant or deny parole to Federal prisoners serving sentences of one year and a day or more, sets conditions of parole, supervises parolees and mandatory releasees, recommits parolees in the event of violations of the conditions of supervision, and determines the termination of supervision in accordance with the Parole Commission and Reorganization Act of 1976.

In 1991, this program will meet the statutory limitations by granting or denying parole within the legal time requirements to all Federal prisoners who are eligible for parole consideration. In addition to this basic function, the Commission will seek to improve the rehabilitation process by monitoring an effective parole supervision program through the U.S. probation officers. Finally, the Commission conducts ongoing research programs and administers its responsibilities under the labor and pension laws.

In 1991, a program enhancement is requested for the disposition of additional cases involving election fraud and criminal misconduct, or corruption of elected public officials. The budget also proposes transferring the resources of the Criminal Divisions' Organized Crime and Racketeering Strike Forces, amounting to 186 positions and $13.6 million, to the U.S. Attorneys.

Land, natural resources, and Indian matters.—This program is responsible for enforcing the nation's civil and criminal environmental laws as well as defending all environmental challenges to government programs. Accordingly, its litigation involves nationally significant issues ranging from the future of energy development to the cleaning up of hazardous waste sites. In addition, it represents the United States in all matters concerning the protection, use and development of the nation's natural resources and public lands, wildlife protection, Indian rights and claims and the acquisition of federal property. In 1991, program increases are requested to meet workload demands arising from federal facility compliance with environmental regulations as well as an unprecedented wave of recent legislation (e.g., $20 billion reauthorization of the Clean Water Act) which expanded the scope of review, increased fines and upgraded criminal sanctions in a number of areas. Funds are also requested to address the litigation arising from the Exxon-Valdez oil spill in Alaska.

The Antitrust Division administers and enforces the antitrust and related statutes. This program primarily involves the investigation of suspected violations of the antitrust laws, the conduct of civil and criminal proceedings in the Federal courts, and the maintenance of competitive conditions.

In 1991, the Antitrust Division will continue to collect filing fees for premerger notifications and will retain up to $20,000,000 of these fees. Of this amount, up to $15,000,000 will be used for the Division's Preservation of Competitive Market Structure Program. Fees retained in excess of $15,000,000 will be used for case management and the Antitrust Division's Termination and Prevention of Private Cartel Behavior Program as well as its Preservation of Competitive Market Structure Program. The President's budget continues the increase of the Antitrust Division's program level (total obligations) begun in 1990. Staffing will increase to 600 workyears in 1991, compared to 508 in 1989. Program level will increase from $45 million in 1989, to $54 million in 1991. These increased program levels will allow the Division to pursue its mission more aggressively.

The Government is represented in each of the 94 judicial districts by a U.S. Attorney. The U.S. Attorneys are responsible for the prosecution of criminal offenses against the United States, the representation of the Government in civil actions in which the United States is concerned, and the initiation of proceedings for the collection of fines, penalties, and forfeitures owed to the United States. The 1991 estimates provide for growing criminal prosecutions, including drug law prosecutions; increased forfeiture of assets acquired through illegal activities; recovery of money owed to the United States through debt collection activity; and support for the Project Eagle office automation system. The President's Violent Crime and Financial Institutions Fraud initiatives added over 1,500 positions to the U.S. Attorneys in 1990. For 1991, increases are requested to fund the annualization costs associated with these large, 1990 increases.

The Federal Government is represented in each of the 94 judicial districts by a U.S. Marshal. The primary mission of the U.S. Marshals Service is responsibility for the protection of the Federal judiciary, protection of witnesses, execution of warrants and court orders, management of seized assets, and custody and transportation of unsentenced prisoners. It is the principal support force in the Federal judicial system and an integral part of the Federal law enforcement community. Program increases are requested for protection of the judicial process, prisoner detention and transportation, management of seized assets, D.C. Superior Court operations, and necessary support services. The Budget also provides $12.7 million to renovate 115 courtroom holding cells, prisoner detention areas, and courtroom elevators.

Reimbursable program.—Federal funds in 1991 are derived primarily from the U.S. Air Force for Intercontinental Ballistic Missile transportation security services provided by the U.S. Marshals Service, as well as the Bureau of Prisons for the transportation of sentenced prisoners, the Department of State for security details at the United Nations, and drug law enforcement for security services. Non-Federal funds are derived from State and local governments for witness protection and for the transportation of prisoners pursuant to State writs and from fees collected from service of civil process and sales associated with judicial orders.

Care of U.S. prisoners in non-Federal institutions.—Under this program, the U.S. Marshals Service contracts with State and local jails to board Federal prisoners and detainees for short periods of time. These periods of detention occur before and during a trial and while awaiting transfer to Federal institutions after conviction. Approximately 83,000 prisoners will be boarded in approximately 875 jails at an average cost of $42.27 per offender day in 1991.

Cooperative agreement program.—Agreements are negotiated with State and local governments for renovating, constructing, and equipping facilities that detain Federal prisoners.

Reimbursable program.—Federal funds in 1989 are derived from Emergency Drug Funding, P.L. 101-45, for the care of U.S. prisoners.

Fees and expenses are paid to witnesses who appear on behalf of the Government in cases in which the United States is a party. Costs incurred are affected by factors over which the Department of Justice exercises little control. The U.S. Attorneys, the U.S. Marshals, and the Department's six legal divisions are served by this appropriation.

Fees and expenses of witnesses.—Provides for payment of fees and expenses associated with the preparation and presentation of testimony on behalf of the United States for fact witnesses, who testify as to events or facts about which they have personal knowledge, and for expert witnesses, who provide technical or scientific testimony. Also, this program pays the fees of physicians and psychiatrists who examine accused persons upon order of the court to determine their mental competency. Significant increases are requested for 1991 to cover the expenses of the additional attorney positions added in 1990.

Protection of witnesses.—Provides for payment of subsistence costs to assure the safety of Government witnesses whose testimony on behalf of the United States places them or their families in jeopardy.

Victim compensation fund.—This fund pays restitution to any victim of a crime committed by a protected witness who causes or threatens death or serious bodily injury.

Private counsel.—Provides for payments to private counsel retained to represent Government employees who are sued for actions taken while performing their official duties.

Reimbursable program.—Reimbursements are received from States and localities to cover the costs of maintaining those State and local organized crime witnesses and their families who have been accepted into the witness protection program.

The Civil Liberties Act of 1988 provides for restitution payments to be made to Japanese Americans who were evacuated or relocated from their homes and interned during World War II. Payments of $20,000 to each eligible individual will be made from this fund. The Act provides that no more than $500 million is to be provided in any year.

The 1991 level provides the $500 million. Consistent with section 209 of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990, payments from the Civil liberties public education fund are entitlements for the purposes of the Congressional Budget Act. Appropriations to this account are discretionary. However, the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990 included advance appropriations for 1991, 1992, and 1993, fully funding the entitlement payments. These payments are deemed to be mandatory for the purpose of budget classification.

United States trustee system fund.—The Bankruptcy Judges, U.S. Trustees and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-554), expanded the pilot program to a twenty-one region nationwide program encompassing ninety-four judicial districts by October 1992. The United States trustee program supervises the administration of bankruptcy cases in the Federal Bankruptcy Courts. In 1989, the final six regions were certified by the Attorney General. In 1989, the program was totally funded from receipts to the fund. The program no longer uses any monies from the general fund of the Federal Government and is self-supporting from fees. The 1991 Budget includes $1 million to provide more rigorous audit coverage of private trustees. In addition to the increased audit coverage requested, the FBI's 1991 budget request includes funds for 28 positions to conduct bankruptcy fraud investigations.

The Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF) Program consists of 13 regional task forces which consolidate the resources and expertise of 11 member Federal agencies, in cooperation with State and local investigators and prosecutors, to target and destroy major narcotic trafficking and money-laundering organizations. The task forces perform the following activities:

1. Law Enforcement.—This activity includes the resources for direct investigative and support activities of the task forces, focusing on the interdiction and disruption of drug trafficking controlled by various organized crime enterprises. Agencies participating under the law enforcement function of the OCDETF Program are the Drug Enforcement Administration, Federal Bureau of Investigation, U.S. Customs Service, Internal Revenue Service, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, U.S. Coast Guard, U.S. Marshals Service, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

2. Prosecution.—This activity includes the resources for the prosecution of cases generated through the investigative efforts of task force agents. Litigation efforts are targeted selectively on the criminal leadership involved in drug trafficking and are intended to dissolve organized illicit enterprises. This includes activities designed to secure the seizure and forfeiture of the assets of these enterprises. Participating agencies are the U.S. Attorneys, Criminal Division and the Tax Division.

3. Administrative Support.—This activity includes the resources for a Washington-based administrative staff which provides policy guidance, central coordination, and administrative support to the headquarters of the 11 member Federal agencies and the 13 regional task forces. The administrative staff is also responsible for financial management, records management, and maintenance of the OCDETF case management system.

In 1983 and 1984, the OCDETF Program operated as a single appropriation reimbursing participating agencies for their involvement. Beginning in 1985, and continuing through 1989, the resources were appropriated directly to the participating agencies. Pursuant to the provisions of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, a single appropriation for expenses relating to all Federal agencies participating in the OCDETF Program was established in 1990.

The planned distribution of budget authority for fiscal years 1990 and 1991 among the participating Federal agencies is as follows:

The overall objectives of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) are to uphold the law—to investigate violations of Federal criminal law, to protect the United States from hostile intelligence efforts, to provide assistance to other Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies and to perform these responsibilities in a manner that is faithful to the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

These objectives result in the FBI's being actively involved in a wide range of investigations, including traditional law enforcement investigations (bank robbery, kidnaping, fugitive, bank embezzlement, etc.), investigations involving more modern phenomena (organized crime, white-collar crime, drug investigations, civil rights violations, antitrust violations, etc.), and investigations of hostile intelligence activities within the United States. The FBI has concurrent jurisdiction with DEA over Federal drug violations.

The activities of the FBI are divided into the following general categories:

Criminal, security, and other investigations.—This activity includes all field investigations of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. These investigations are conducted by FBI Special Agents in 56 field offices and approximately 400 resident agencies located throughout the United States and Puerto Rico. National priority investigations include white-collar crime, drugs, organized crime, counterterrorism and foreign counterintelligence, and investigations relating to violent crimes and major offenders. Other investigative areas are civil rights, civil applicant, and other investigations. An increase of $22,516,000 is planned to further FBI efforts within its drug investigations program. Increases of $24,039,000 for white-collar crime and $8,000,000 to address Asian Organized Crime are also planned. For the FBI's other field programs, an increase of $40,610,000 is planned.

The FBI is reimbursed by other Federal agencies for certain investigative activities such as pre-employment background inquiries and name checks.

This activity also includes resources devoted to national program supervision, coordination, and management of FBI investigations and liaison with foreign police and security services through Legal Attaches.

This includes enhancements of $2,326,000 for training, $2,108,000 for Federal laboratory expenses, $154,000 for Automated Data Processing and Telecommunications, $3,482,000 for Records Management, and $6,590,000 for Technical Field Support and Equipment.

State and local assistance.—The FBI supports State and local law enforcement by providing training, laboratory, identification, and informational services. Emphasis is being placed on the training of State and local police instructors to enable their agencies to become more self-sufficient and, thereby, allow the FBI to concentrate its resources on high priority initiatives. Training is conducted at various locations within the United States but most courses are conducted at the FBI National Academy near Quantico, VA.

The FBI's National Crime Information Center (NCIC) and Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) programs provide criminal justice information to Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies without charge. The NCIC system contains over 20 million records relating to wanted and missing persons, stolen property, and criminal histories. The UCR program collects data from over 16,000 law enforcement agencies and provides this information to criminal justice agencies and researchers, the academic community, and others.

The FBI's Identification Division is the national repository for fingerprint identification data. In 1991, approximately 8.1 million fingerprint cards will be processed. Processing of noncriminal fingerprint checks for State and local agencies and banking institutions is on a reimbursable basis.

Some workload measures include press releases, assistance to media, dissemination of FBI publications, Title III applications, undercover operations proposals, civil actions, field office audits, and position classification matters. Program changes include an enhancement of $182,000 to conduct mandated audits of undercover and financial operations.

Note.—Excludes $68,366 thousand in budget authority in 1990 and $91,316 thousand in 1991 for activities transferred to the Interagency Law Enforcement, Organized Crime Drug Enforcement appropriation. Comparable amounts for 1989 ($64,752 thousand) are included above.

The mission of the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) is to control abuse of narcotics and dangerous drugs by restricting the aggregate supply of those drugs. At the Federal level, DEA is the lead drug law enforcement agency. DEA accomplishes its objectives through coordination with State, local, and other Federal officials in drug enforcement activities, development and maintenance of drug intelligence systems, regulation of legitimate controlled substances activities, and enforcement coordination and intelligence-gathering activities with foreign government agencies.

Cooperation among Federal law enforcement agencies is extensive, especially within the 13 organized crime drug enforcement task forces (OCDETF). DEA's involvement is integral to this nationwide coordinated enforcement strategy. With the OCDETF program and the expansion of other agency cooperative efforts, overall drug enforcement capabilities have been significantly strengthened in recent years.

The activities of the DEA are divided into the following general categories:

ENFORCEMENT

Domestic enforcement.—This activity encompasses DEA's general efforts to eliminate or immobilize major drug trafficking organizations and thereby reduce the domestic supply of illicit drugs. In 1991, additional resources of $47,906,000 will provide significant agent staffing increases for major trafficking areas within the United States and increased administrative and technical support to DEA's field offices.

Special enforcement operations/programs.—This activity encompasses efforts to reduce the availability of illicit drugs by immobilizing targeted organizations that are substantially responsible for importation and distribution of drugs and by focusing enforcement operations on specific drug trafficking problems. In 1991, additional resources totaling $14,565,000 will provide for an increased ability to target and immobilize drug trafficking organizations and specified drug trafficking problems.

State and local task forces.—This activity encompasses efforts to reduce drug availability and immobilize major drug trafficking organizations through intergovernmental cooperation with State and Local law enforcement agencies. There are currently 44 State and Local Task Forces participating in the program. In 1991, additional resources of $9,897,000 will expand the program by nine additional task forces.

The measures below reflect the level of activity performed by this program.

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
DEA initiated arrests (includes SEO/P arrests)	9,407	9,913	11,707

DEA/OCDE arrests	3,946	3,946	4,267
DEA-wide assets seized ($ millions)	976	1,006	1,136

Foreign cooperative investigations.—This activity encompasses efforts to (1) disrupt, as close to the source as possible, production of opium, heroin, cocaine, marijuana, and illicitly produced and diverted legitimate dangerous drugs destined for the United States, and (2) collect and disseminate intelligence regarding narcotics production and trafficking. In 1991, $5,084,000 to expand DEA's presence overseas in select source and transshipment countries is requested. The measures below reflect the level of activity performed by this program.

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Foreign cooperative arrests	923	923	942

Diversion control.—This activity seeks to reduce, to the maximum extent, the diversion of legitimately produced controlled substances into illicit channels at all levels of distribution and to provide leadership and support to ensure that State and local agencies and the pharmaceutical industry establish and maintain programs and policies to control diversion. Additional diversion control resources of $2,323,000 and 35 positions will implement the Chemical Control and Diversion Act of 1988 both domestically and overseas.

The measures below reflect the level of activity performed by this program.

Criminal	1,505	1,500	1,500
Pre-registrant	1,300	1,300	1,300
Public interest revocations	441	450	450

Intelligence.—This activity encompasses the collection, analysis, and dissemination of drug intelligence in support of the enforcement operations of DEA and other Federal, State and local agencies. In 1991, an additional $7,898,000 will expand DEA's intelligence capabilities by 85 positions, enabling DEA to provide sufficient financial and operational intelligence to support its investigative workforce and maintain its role as the lead agency for drug intelligence. This request includes 17 positions for the El Paso Intelligence Center (EPIC).

DEA laboratory services.—This activity encompasses laboratory analysis of evidence and expert testimony in support of investigation and prosecution of drug traffickers. In 1991, additional resources of $3,643,000 will increase laboratory support positions, expand the heroin signature program and implement a Hazardous Waste Disposal program. The measures below reflect the level of activity performed by this program.

for investigative and other personnel; executive, mid-level management, and supervisory training for appropriate agency officials, and foreign language training for all DEA personnel assigned to overseas and border offices as needed. In 1991, $2,362,000 in additional resources will expand training for DEA personnel and provide the training program with needed firearms training instructors. Research, engineering, and technical operations.—This activity encompasses providing high quality and timely radio communications capability, technical and investigative equipment assistance support, maintenance and operation of an aircraft fleet, and research programs directly related to the DEA law enforcement and intelligence functions. In 1991, additional resources of $39,843,000 will upgrade technical equipment, establish an overseas radio program, replace 11 inefficient and aging aircraft, purchase two new aircraft for overseas initiatives, and re-locate the airwing.

ADP and telecommunications.—This activity encompasses automated data processing and telecommunication support on a nationwide and worldwide basis. In 1991, additional resources totaling $1,130,000 are requested for enhancing the computer capabilities of EPIC and to address the current ADP staffing shortfall.

Records management.—This activity encompasses effective and efficient records management, Freedom of Information/Privacy Act, and library support.

STATE AND LOCAL ASSISTANCE

State and local training and laboratory services.—This activity encompasses training for State and local agencies and laboratory services for State, local, military, and other Federal professionals. Agency-wide resources are also targeted for prevention of drug abuse.

Work load measures are provided below:

PROGRAM DIRECTION

Executive direction and administrative services.—This activity encompasses the overall management and direction of DEA to include personnel, general services, and Equal Employment Opportunity functions. In 1991, $1,161,000 will meet the increasing workload requirements for legal support related to the assets forfeiture program, contracts, office services, facilities, and property management.

REIMBURSABLE PROGRAM

Reimbursable program.—The primary reimbursements to DEA are for the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force program, the training of foreign drug law enforcement officials (funded by the Department of State), the expenses incurred in managing seized assets, and other purposes for which DEA is reimbursed from the Department of Justice Assets Forfeiture Fund.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service is responsible for administering laws relating to the admission, exclusion, deportation, and naturalization of aliens. Specifically, the Service inspects aliens to determine their admissibility into the United States; adjudicates requests of aliens for benefits under the law; prevents illegal entry into the United States; investigates, apprehends, and removes aliens in this country in violation of the law; and examines alien applicants wishing to become citizens.

Enforcement.—This activity contains resources for prevention of illegal entry into the United States and facilitating the entry of qualified persons. This includes inspection of applicants for admission, patrol of the border, and the location of illegal aliens who are in the United States following illegal entry or violation of status after legal entry. Apprehensions are made through the inspection of farms and ranches, by the investigation of information about the location of undocumented aliens, and through investigative case work. Also included are the resources for the Service's nationwide anti-smuggling program and for the detention and deportation of illegal aliens.

Most reimbursements received by the Service are from the inspections, legalization, and examination user fee programs. Also included are reimbursements for retrofitting conveyances for drug law enforcement purposes and for managing and operating the vehicle seizure program. These resources are from the Department of Justice Asset forfeiture fund. For 1991, increases are requested for converting temporary immigration inspectors to permanent status, equipment and additional staff for the border patrol, and an anti-discrimination public outreach campaign for employers.

Beginning in 1990, adjudications and naturalization activities were entirely funded by the immigration examinations fee program. All operations conducted overseas, except preinspection, are within this activity.

Included are functions of the warden's office, personnel, financial management, safety, staff training, mechanical services, motor pool operations, powerhouse operations, and other administrative functions.

In 1991, resources are requested to provide for a projected increase in the inmate population and to activate two new prisons, and twelve new housing units at existing institutions. In total, the new institutions will add 3,315 new beds. Resources are also requested to expand Electronic Monitoring programs and increase staffing at existing institutions.

The National Institute of Corrections (NIC) was established by the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 to provide leadership in improving correctional programs and practices, especially in State and local organizations. The NIC awards contracts and grants to provide technical assistance to requesting correctional organizations; to maintain an information service to provide information on the latest developments, research results, et cetera, in the field of corrections; to provide training to the correctional community to improve systems and skills; and to conduct limited research and evaluation of correctional activities.

The NIC Jail Center will continue to improve the knowledge and skills of sheriffs and jail administrators, enabling them to upgrade services and practices within their jail operations.

The National Academy of Corrections will offer training to local correctional personnel working in prisons, community corrections, and jails. In 1991, the Academy will train approximately 2,500 students in the areas of management theory, current issues affecting jails, institutions, probation and parole, standards implementation, inmate services and programs, and the use of volunteers and community resources.

The dissemination of relevant correctional policies, programs, practices and resource documents will continue through the clearinghouse activity of NIC.

Federal Prison Industries, Inc., was created by Congress in 1934 and is a wholly-owned Government corporation. Its mission is to employ and train Federal inmates through a diversified program providing products and services to other Federal agencies. These operations are conducted in such a manner as to offer a minimum of competition to private industry and labor. Employment provides inmates with work, occupational knowledge and skills, plus money for personal expenses and family assistance.

The Corporation has been expanding its operations to provide additional industrial employment opportunities at existing and planned institutions.

Budget program.—Federal Prison Industries, Inc., is entirely self-sustaining. No appropriations are required. The amounts used by the Corporation for administrative expenses and vocational training expenses are subject to a congressional limitation. Information regarding this limitation is provided separately following this account.

Financing program.—Revenues are derived entirely from the sale of products and services to other Federal agencies. Operating expenses are applied against these revenues, resulting in operating income or loss. Earnings surplus to the needs of the manufacturing operations, capital improvements and cash reserves are used to pay vocational training expenses, meritorious service awards, and accident compensation.

Operating results.—To date, Federal Prison Industries, Inc., has returned to the Treasury a total of $82 million of retained income excess to the Corporation's needs. No contributions from budget authority have been made to offset deficits for non-revenue producing outlays since the inception of the fund.

The Office of Justice Programs carries out policy coordination and general management responsibilities for the Bureau of Justice Assistance, Bureau of Justice Statistics, National Institute of Justice, Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention and the Office of Victims of Crime, which administer the following programs and activities.

Research, evaluation, and demonstration programs.—Funds provide for and encourage the development of basic and applied research for the improvement of Federal, State, and local criminal, civil, and juvenile justice systems; new methods for the prevention and reduction of crime and the detection, apprehension, and rehabilitation of criminals; and the dissemination of the results of such research efforts. An increase of $1,758,000 is requested for 1991 for the development of a less-than-lethal weapon.

Criminal justice statistical programs.—Funds provide for the collection and analysis of statistical information concerning crime, victims, offenders, criminal justice processes, juvenile delinquency, and civil disputes in support of public and private policy and decisionmaking about society's response to crime; planning, coordination, implementation and provision of technical assistance to States to initiate innovative applications of communications and information systems technology for State and local criminal justice systems; and assurance of conformance with privacy and security regulations. An increase of $1,911,000 is requested for 1991 for redesign of the National Crime Survey, a federal integrated data base, and to initiate a comprehensive data base of drug and gun related crimes.

State and local assistance.—This program is broken into two parts: a block grant program which receives 80 percent of the funds and a discretionary grant program which receives the remaining 20 percent. In 1989 funds were appropriated for a discretionary grant program only. No new budget authority is requested for 1991.

Emergency assistance.—Funds are used to provide emergency assistance to a State or locality after the Attorney General has determined that a law enforcement emergency exists. A law enforcement emergency is a situation where the capacity of local resources has been exceeded. No funds are requested for 1991.

Juvenile justice programs.—Funds under this activity assist States and localities in the development of more effective education, training, research, prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation programs in the area of juvenile delinquency. No funds are requested for the traditional Juvenile Justice program in 1991. Instead, $7,500,000 has been requested to continue a High Risk Youth program that addresses the problems with gangs and drugs and their relationship with the juvenile justice system. It is also proposed that grant recipients contribute a hard cash match of 50 percent of total project costs.

Missing children.—Funds for this program will be used to reduce the incidence of crimes against children, particularly kidnaping and sexual exploitation, by assisting families, citizen groups, law enforcement agencies and government institutions in a national effort to insure the safety and protection of children. The 1991 request of $7,971,000 includes an increase of $4,000,000 to enhance the efforts of State and local communities in their comprehensive response to missing and exploited children issues such as search teams, investigations, crisis intervention, as well as reunification with family.

Public safety officers' benefits program.—Funds are used to pay death benefits to eligible survivors of public safety officers who die in the line of duty. In 1990 this program was established as a separate account.

Mariel Cubans.—This is a reimbursement to certain States for part of the cost of incarcerating Mariel Cubans who had originally been paroled by the Federal Government. No new budget authority is requested for 1991.

Crime control programs.—This activity provides for expenditures from past Law Enforcement Assistance Administration programs which were not continued under existing legislation.

Regional information sharing system.—This is a program to aid State and local law enforcement agencies in the exchange of intelligence information. A total of $9,750,000 is requested in 1991, along with a proposal that program participants provide a 25 percent hard cash match of total program costs.

Anti-drug abuse program.—Funds for this program have been appropriated since 1987 to assist State and local governments in the war against drugs. In 1991, a total of $490,000,000 is requested for this program providing an increase of $45,263,000, to allow State and local units of government to expand and enhance their drug control activities.

Management and administration.—Funds provide for executive direction and control, program operation, and administrative support of the above activities.

The planned distribution of budget authority by fiscal year is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

This program provides payment of death benefits to eligible survivors of public safety officers who die in the line of duty. Amendments in the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 raised the benefit from $50,000 to $100,000 and provides for an annual cost of living escalator tied to the Consumer Price Index (CPI). On October 1 of every year, this escalator will increase the benefit by the percentage of increase to the CPI.

This account provides for a flexible and decentralized system of Federal and local programs of training and other services for economically disadvantaged persons designed to lead to permanent gains in employment. Such programs are currently authorized by the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA). The account is forward funded on a July to June cycle.

Grants to States.—Includes block grants to provide financial assistance to States and territories to design and operate training programs to meet their training and employment needs, grants to operate a summer youth employment and training program, and services for displaced workers under JTPA Title III. Seventy percent of the JTPA block grant funding will be used for training, including remedial education and basic skills, institutional training, and on-the-job training. Legislation is proposed to amend JTPA for 1990 to replace the existing block grant and summer youth programs with separate programs serving adults and youth. These new programs, which would be targeted to those economically-disadvantaged individuals with particularly severe barriers to employment, will enhance program quality by providing more intensive and comprehensive services. In addition, the dislocated worker program authorized by JTPA will be consolidated with Trade Act programs in 1991 in a Worker Readjustment account. Legislation will be proposed to repeal such Trade Act adjustment assistance effective October 1, 1990.

Federally administered programs.—Provides program support for Job Training Partnership Act activities and training assistance through nationally administered programs for special segments of the population that have particular disadvantages in the labor market. Among groups to be served are Indians and other native Americans, migrant and seasonal farmworkers, and veterans. Also included is the Job Corps, which is a national network of residential centers designed to provide training in literacy, arithmetic, and vocational skills for youth aged 14-21 who have severe educational and economic disadvantages. Job Corps slots will increase to 41,113 with the addition of two new centers in 1991. Also included in this activity is training for the homeless, as authorized by the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act. Legislation will be proposed to extend this program through 1991. The proposed 1990 JTPA amendments will authorize a Youth Opportunities Unlimited demonstration program funded by this account to provide comprehensive services to youth living in high poverty areas.

Legislation is proposed to terminate the separate Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) program beginning October 1, 1990. Workers displaced by imports will receive services through the Economic Dislocation and Worker Adjustment Assistance program under title III of the Job Training Partnership Act, as amended. Upon passage of the proposed legislation, workers collecting TAA benefits during the week including September 30, 1990 would continue to collect the balance of their TAA entitlement. The $40 million shown for 1991 after legislation reflects the estimated cost of paying remaining TAA benefits to such workers. Benefits under the Redwood National Park Amendments of 1978 are also reflected in this proposal.

NOTES

State integrity and contingency obligations for 1989 are included in State operations.

The amount in 1990 for offsetting collections from trust funds, which is set by the appropriation language above, was reduced by P.L. 99–177.

Unemployment compensation.—State operations amounts provide administrative grants to State agencies which pay unemployment compensation to eligible workers and collect State unemployment taxes from employers. These agencies also pay unemployment benefits to former Federal personnel as well as trade adjustment assistance to eligible individuals. Grants are also provided to upgrade State automated systems for benefit payments and collection of taxes. State integrity activities provide administrative grants to State agencies to improve the integrity and financial stability of the unemployment compensation program through a quality control program and related activities designed to assess and reduce errors and prevent fraud, waste, and abuse in the payment of unemployment compensation benefits and the collection of unemployment taxes. National activities relating to the Federal-State unemployment insurance programs are conducted through contracts or agreements with the State agencies. Contingency funds are available only to meet increases in the costs of administration resulting from changes in State law, increases in the number of claims filed and claims paid, or increased salary costs caused by changes in State compensation plans.

Employment service.—The public employment service is a nationwide system providing no-fee employment services to individuals who are seeking employment and employers who are seeking workers. State employment service activities are financed by allotment to States distributed under a demographically based funding formula established under the Wagner-Peyser Act, as amended. Employment service allotments are funded on a program year basis running from July 1 through June 30 of the following year.

Employment service activities serving national needs including interstate job listings, and labor certification of aliens are conducted through specific reimbursable agreements between the States and the Federal Government under the Wagner-Peyser Act, as amended. Funding is also provided in 1991 for amortization payments for States which had independent retirement plans prior to 1980 in their State employment service agencies. As a part of a program to improve the quality of the American workforce, the Department has initiated an Employment Service review to examine its role in increasing the efficiency of the labor market.

The financial transactions of the Federal-State and railroad unemployment insurance systems are made through the Unemployment Trust Fund. All State and Federal unemployment tax receipts are deposited in the trust fund and invested in Government securities until needed for benefit payments or administrative costs. States may receive repayable advances from the fund when their balances in the fund are insufficient to pay benefits. The fund may receive repayable advances from the general fund when it has insufficient balances to make advances to States or to pay the Federal share of extended benefits.

State payroll taxes pay for all regular State benefits. During periods of high State unemployment, extended benefits, financed one-half by State payroll taxes and one-half by the Federal unemployment payroll tax, are also paid. The Federal tax pays the costs of Federal and State administration of unemployment insurance and veterans employment services and 97% of the costs of the employment service.

The Federal employees compensation account provides funds to States for unemployment compensation benefits paid to eligible former Federal civilian personnel, Postal Service employees, and ex-servicemembers. Benefits paid are reimbursed to the Federal employees compensation account by the various Federal agencies. Any additional resources necessary to assure that the account can make the required payments to States will be provided from the Advances to the Unemployment Trust Fund and Other funds account.

Both the benefit payments and administrative expenses of the separate unemployment insurance program for railroad employees are paid from the unemployment trust fund and receipts from the tax on railroad payrolls are deposited in the fund to meet expenses.

This wholly owned government corporation administers programs of mandatory insurance to prevent loss of pension benefits under covered private, defined-benefit pension plans if single-employer plans terminate or if multiemployer plans are unable to pay benefits. Terminated plans are taken over by the Corporation. The Corporation assumes control of their assets, administers them in a trust fund held in a private bank, and takes responsibility for paying benefits. The Corporation also provides repayable assistance to insolvent multiemployer plans when necessary to pay benefits and to forestall termination and subsequent Corporation responsibility to pay benefits.

Administrative expenses subject to limitation.—Provides case processing, benefits administration, resource management, legal support, public information, executive direction, and other support functions.

Other contractual services.—These contracts provide for needed but unpredictable costs related to benefits payment services, investment management, and legal and financial services arising from pension plan terminations.

Benefit payments.—Checks are issued when due to pay plan participants and other beneficiaries in plans which have terminated.

Financial assistance.—If multiemployer-sponsored plans become insolvent, the Corporation gives repayable loans to enable the plans to continue paying benefits. Financial assistance to an insolvent plan is made only after the plan takes a series of prescribed steps to place the plan on a sound financial basis.

Financing.—The primary source of financing is a per capita annual premium paid by sponsors of ongoing covered plans, which varies according to the plans' funding level. Other sources of financing include assets from terminated plans, investment income, and amounts due the Corporation from the sponsors of terminating plans. Also, the Corporation is authorized to borrow up to $100 million from the U.S. Treasury.

NOTES

Excludes $204 thousand in budget authority in 1991 for activities transferred to Departmental Management, Salaries and expenses. Comparable amounts for 1989 ($187 thousand) and 1990 ($194 thousand) are included above.

The amount in 1990 for offsetting collections from trust funds, which is set by the appropriation language above, was reduced by Public Law 99–177.

Enforcement of wage and hour standards.—The Wage and Hour Division works to obtain compliance with the minimum wage, overtime, child labor, and other employment standards under the Fair Labor Standards Act, Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act, certain provisions of the Immigration Reform and Control Act, and the wage garnishment provisions in title III of the Consumer Credit Protection Act. Prevailing wages are determined and employment standards enforced under various Government contract wage standards. In 1991, approximately 395,000 persons are expected to be aided under the Fair Labor Standards Act through assessing employers for underpayments and securing agreements to pay the workers. Through the special minimum wage program, 410,000 persons will be aided by certificates issued and employment authorized. In Government contract compliance actions, 48,700 persons will be aided through assessing employers for underpayments and securing agreements to pay the workers. Under the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act program, approximately 146,000 persons will be aided through enforcement of employment standards for migrant and seasonal agricultural workers. In the course of all on-site investigations, compliance officers will routinely check for employer compliance with the eligibility recordkeeping requirements of the Immigration Reform and Control Act. About 2,350 investigations will be conducted to ensure compliance with homeworker employment restrictions. The Wage and Hour Division will continue to provide enforcement of the Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988.

Federal contractor EEO standards enforcement.—The Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (OFCCP) works to ensure nondiscrimination in employment on Federal contracts. It is responsible for conducting compliance activities to assure that Federal contractors take affirmative action in the hiring and promotion of minorities and women under the authority of Executive Orders 11246 and 11375. Administration of affirmative action provisions of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, relating to the hiring and promotion of physically and mentally handicapped individuals, is included in this activity. Also included is the administration of the Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act providing for affirmative action by Federal contractors to employ and advance in employment disabled veterans and veterans of the Vietnam era. In 1991, about 6,150 compliance reviews and 1,085 complaint investigations will be conducted. During these reviews and investigations, employer compliance with the Immigration Reform and Control Act will be checked regarding hiring only legally authorized workers. A total of 5,679 other compliance actions will be conducted with respect to contractor employment practices.

Federal programs for workers' compensation.—Under this income maintenance activity, the Employment Standards Administration administers the Federal Employees' Compensation Act, the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, and the benefit provisions of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977. These programs insure that eligible disabled and injured workers or their survivors receive compensation and medical benefits and a range of services including rehabilitation, supervision of medical care, and technical and advisory counseling to which they are entitled. assistance is provided to the States to upgrade their workers' compensation laws.

Executive direction and support services.—This activity includes planning, personnel management, financial management, and Federal/State liaison programs, management systems implementation, and data processing operations. Major goals in 1991 will include implementing financial management initiatives; continued efforts to eliminate internal fraud, waste, and mismanagement; the improvement of management information, automated data processing, and program and fiscal accountability; and legislative and regulatory improvements.

Federal Employees' Compensation Act benefits.—Currently, approximately 54,600 claimants are receiving long-term compensation benefits for job-related injuries, diseases, or deaths, as specified in the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) and its extensions. Pertinent medical bills are paid for compensable injuries. Compensation benefits are paid when the injury causes loss of job time. Workers suffering noncontroverted, traumatic injuries continue in full pay status for a period not to exceed 45 days, paid by the employing agency rather than through this account. All medical costs associated with these continuation-of-pay claims are examined and paid by the FECA program. In addition, the FECA program is responsible for claims extending beyond 45 days, all nontraumatic injuries and controverted claims, medical costs associated with the above, and the review of the agency-paid continuation-of-pay claims. Costs to this account are subsequently charged back to the employing agency.

Panama Canal Commission Compensation Fund.—This fund has been established to provide for the accumulation of funds to meet the Panama Canal Commission's obligations to defray costs of workers' compensation which will accrue pursuant to the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA). On December 31, 1999, the Commission will be dissolved as set forth in the Panama Canal Treaty of 1977, and the liability of the Commission for payments beyond that date will not end with its termination. The establishment of this fund, into which funds will be deposited on a regular basis by the Commission is in conjunction with the transfer of the administration of the FECA program from the Commission to the Department of Labor effective January 1, 1989.

The trust fund consists of all moneys collected from the coal mine industry under the provisions of the Black Lung Benefits Revenue Act of 1981, as amended by the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985, in the form of an excise tax on mined coal tonnage. These moneys are expended to pay compensation, medical, and survivor benefits to eligible miners and their survivors, where mine employment terminated prior to 1970 or where no mine operator can be assigned liability. In addition the fund pays all administrative costs incurred in the operation of the black lung program. The fund is administered jointly by the Secretaries of Labor, the Treasury, and Health and Human Services. The Benefits Revenue Act provides for repayable advances to the fund in the event fund resources will not be adequate to meet program obligations. Such advances are to be repaid with interest. Advances outstanding at the end of the year are: 1981, $1,510 million; 1982, $1,793 million; 1983, $2,151 million; 1984, $2,497 million; 1985, $2,833 million; 1986, $2,884 million; 1987, $2,952 million; 1988, $2,993 million; 1989, $3,049 million; 1990, $3,104 million; and 1991, $3,465 million.

The trust funds consist of amounts received from employers for the death of an employee where no person is entitled to compensation for such death, for fines and penalty payments, and pursuant to an annual assessment of the industry, for the general expenses of the fund under the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, as amended.

These trust funds are available for payments of additional compensation for second injuries. When a second injury, when combined with a previous disability, results in increased permanent partial disability, permanent total disability, or death, the employer provides compensation only for the disability caused by the subsequent injury; compensation to supplement the employer's payment is provided from this fund. In addition, the fund pays one-half of the increased benefits provided under the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, as amended, for persons on the rolls prior to 1972. Maintenance payments are made to disabled employees undergoing vocational rehabilitation to enable them to return to remunerative occupations, and the costs of necessary rehabilitation services not otherwise available to disabled workers are defrayed. Payments are made in cases where other circumstances preclude payment by an employer and to provide medical, surgical, and other treatment in disability cases where there has been a default by the insolvency of an uninsured employer.

Note.—Excludes $136 thousand in budget authority in 1991 for activities transferred to: Departmental Management, Salaries and Expenses. Comparable amounts for 1989 ($124 thousand) and 1990 ($128 thousand) are included above.

Safety and health standards.—New and revised standards are proposed and promulgated to protect the safety and health of workers. All new standards, except emergency temporary standards, are promulgated under procedures providing opportunity for public comment. Before any standard is proposed or promulgated, a determination is made that: (1) a significant risk of serious employee injury or health impairment exists; (2) the standard will reduce this risk; (3) the standard is economically and technologically sound; and (4) the standard is cost-effective when compared with alternative regulatory proposals providing equal levels of protection.

Enforcement.—The Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 provides for enforcement of Federal standards in States declining to assert jurisdiction, and for grants to assist States in administering and enforcing State standards. Compliance with occupational safety and health standards is gained in part by the physical inspection of plants and facilities, and by encouraging the voluntary protection efforts of employers and employees. Programs are targeted to the investigation of claims of imminent danger and employee complaints, the investigation of fatal and catastrophic accidents, programmed inspections of firms with injury-illness rates that are above the national average, and special emphasis inspections for serious health and safety hazards. OSHA's enforcement strategy will include a selective targeting of inspections and related compliance activities to specific high hazard industries, including occupations where repetitive motion injuries are a problem.

Technical support.—Technical assistance is provided on all aspects of standards setting, variances, compliance assistance, and enforcement programs. Laboratory support is provided to compliance officers. Comprehensive scientific and technical information services are made available. The economic and environmental impacts of proposed standards are analyzed.

Compliance assistance.—This activity contributes to the balanced use of the authority provided by the Act through a variety of employer and employee assistance activities. Under cooperative agreements, State agencies are reimbursed for 90 percent of the costs of providing free onsite consultation to employers upon request. Grants are awarded to non-profit organizations to provide employee and employer training programs, targeted to address specific industry needs for safety and health education. This activity also encourages employers to establish voluntary employee protection programs, and assists Federal agencies in implementing job safety and health programs for Federal workers. Professional training for compliance personnel and others with related workplace safety and health responsibilities is conducted at the OSHA Training Institute.

Safety and health statistics.—Statistics on occupational fatalities, injuries, and illnesses are collected directly or through grants to States and published annually to aid in the identification of occupational safety and health problems and to facilitate administration. The occupational safety and health statistics program is undergoing a redesign to better meet needs for carrying out an effective program on prevention of workplace injuries and illnesses.

Executive direction and administration.—These activities include executive direction, planning and evaluation, management support, legislative liaison, interagency affairs, and administrative services.

The program described below is financed by this appropriation and by reimbursements from other agencies. Those agencies are provided with most of their administrative services overseas by the Department of State.

Executive direction and policy formulation.—This activity identifies resources which provide sound management through the direction of the Secretary and with the assistance of staff officers, specialized offices and functional and regional bureaus, for policy formulation and in pursuit of regional and global foreign policy objectives.

Inspections and audits.—This function is financed by a separate appropriation account established by the Inspector General Act Amendments of 1988.

Conduct of diplomatic relations.—Resources of this activity include: the political and economic reporting and analysis of interests to the United States; the representation of U.S. diplomatic and national interests to countries abroad; and the bilateral and multilateral negotiation of our foreign policy objectives. These resources also fund the conduct of U.S. diplomatic policy through political and multilateral affairs, economic and social affairs, international budgetary and management affairs, and participation in various international organizations.

Conduct of consular relations.—Activities included are overseas and American citizen services, and the issuance of passports to U.S. citizens both here and abroad. Visa services involve the issuance, denial, and adjudication of immigrant and non-immigrant visas; refugee processing; and visa fraud detection and investigation. American citizen services include the issuance of passports, and emergency assistance to American citizens abroad. Passport services include the issuance of passports in the United States and U.S. missions abroad and passport fraud detection and investigation.

Professional development and training.—The professional development and training activity is a continuous process by which the Department ensures that its professionals have the skills, experience and judgment to fulfill its functions at all levels. Training programs are designed to provide employees with the specific functional, area and language skills needed for the conduct of foreign relations in the Department and abroad.

Information management.—This activity identifies resources necessary for the effective and efficient creation, collection, processing, transmission, dissemination, use, storage, and disposition of information required for the formulation and execution of foreign policy and for the conduct of daily business. Its requirements are driven by the informational needs of the President, the Secretary of State, the department and its 260 missions, and approximately fifty government agencies. Components of the information management activity include: telecommunications; classified information handling, unclassified data and word processing; pouch, mail, and publishing services; administration of an electronic and archival records management program; document classification and declassification, information security; and provision of information management services, as appropriate, to all branches of the Government and to the public. In all of these programs, responsibilities range from policy setting to planning and design, implementation, operation, and maintenance. The Department manages large computer and communications centers to provide administrative, consular, economic, and political information. The computer systems support worldwide consular applications, financial management systems, management of building programs, and intelligence research systems.

Security.—This activity identifies resources necessary in meeting security and counterterrorism responsibilities, both foreign and domestic. Covered in this activity are: security operations; engineering services, which relate to the technical defense of Foreign Service personnel and establishments against electronics and physical attack; investigations, such as malfeasance and passport fraud; protection of dignitaries; and physical security operations. In 1991, funding for the security related to overseas construction and renovation projects is transferred to the Acquisition and Maintenance of Buildings Abroad appropriation account.

Medical.—This activity encompasses medical programs for the Department of State, the Foreign Service, and 35 other U.S. Government departments and agencies overseas. Services are provided in Washington as well as at 260 missions worldwide and cover some 60,000 employees and dependents.

Administration and staff activities.—These activities include normal domestic and overseas administrative services such as:

—The direction and control of all administration and management operations, representing and negotiating U.S. government administrative matters with foreign officials and reviewing and setting resource levels and priorities for the various programs and bureaus in the Department.

—The budgeting, financial planning and fiscal operations for the Department of State and most federal agencies resident abroad.

—The management, recruitment and performance evaluation of the Department's Foreign and Civil Service employees and Foreign Service National staff.

—The contracting and procurement of services and supplies, maintenance and repair of equipment and physical property, vehicle operation and shipping and customs services.

—Centralized funding for the payment of salaries and worldwide related benefits to full-time permanent employees.

Grants are made available to States under the following programs for construction and improvements on the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways and for urban and rural transportation programs. To constrain the proliferation of programs exempt from routine funding controls, a Federal-aid highways obligation limitation of $12.013 billion, covering all Federal-aid programs except emergency relief, Alaska Highway, and minimum allocation is proposed.

The 1991 budget proposal for Federal-Aid Highways budget authority is consistent with the amount authorized in the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act. Obligations and obligation limitation levels are consistent with the need to constrain federal spending, while at the same time providing necessary funding for the nation's roads and bridges.

Interstate construction.—Provides grants for the completion of the Interstate System. States can be expected to construct high priority Interstate segments, not yet built, especially gaps between major urbanized areas. States that have completed their portion of the system may use the funds for Interstate 4R purposes.

Interstate 4R.—Preserves and continues the Nation's investment in the Interstate system through a program of resurfacing, restoring, rehabilitation, and reconstruction.

Primary system.—Provides grants to States for highway construction, rehabilitation, reconstruction, and related planning for the primary highway system.

Interstate substitutions.—Provides grants to States and localities which withdrew previously approved Interstate segments and apply authorized funds to substitute highway or transit projects. The budget proposes to consolidate funding for both highway and transit substitute projects within the highway authorization.

Secondary system.—Provides grants to States for highway construction, rehabilitation, reconstruction, and related planning and research on the secondary system.

Urban system.—Provides grants to States for highway construction, rehabilitation, reconstruction, and related planning and research on the urban system.

Bridge program.—Provides grants to States to replace or rehabilitate bridges on and off the Federal-aid systems that are hazardous to the safety of motorists.

Safety construction programs.—Provides grants to States for safety improvements to the highway systems, including hazard elimination, pavement marking, and rail highway crossings.

Federal lands highways.—Provides funds for improvements on forest highways, park roads, Indian reservation roads, and public lands highways. The Department of Transportation coordinates with the land managing agency in the planning studies and program development of public Federal lands highways.

Demonstration projects.—Provides funds not to exceed 80 percent of the cost of demonstration projects specified in Section 149 of Public Law 100-17. The 1991 budget proposal subjects these projects to the obligation limitation.

Administration and research.—Provides for executive and general administrative and research expenses of Federal-aid highways. These funds are controlled by the limitation on general operating expenses.

Other.—Provides for emergency relief, minimum allocation, strategic highway research, and other miscellaneous programs.

Note.—The limitation amount for 1990, which is set by the appropriation language shown above, has been reduced by P.L. 99-177.

This limitation provides for the salaries and expenses of the Federal Highway Administration. Resources are allocated from the following programs: Federal-aid highways, and highway-related safety grants.

Program direction and coordination.—Provides overall management of the highway transportation program, including program review of agency operations; provides legal services for all programs; plans and directs public affairs programs; and develops and recommends policies and standards, and ensures compliance with the civil rights and equal opportunity procedures by the Federal Highway Administration and by recipients of grants-in-aid administered by the Federal Highway Administration.

General program support.—Formulates policy, multiyear and long-range plans and goals for highway programs, and data and analyses for current and long-range programming; conducts direct and contract research and development relating to traffic operations, including gridlock problems, new construction techniques, and the social and environmental aspects of highways; provides administrative support services for all elements of the Federal Highway Administration; and provides on-the-job training for employees of the Federal Highway Administration and training opportunities for other highway-related personnel. Recognizing the importance of research as an investment in the efficiency of future transportation, the 1991 budget includes $44.1 million for highway science and technology research including $13 million for development of intelligent vehicle/highway systems to address congestion. The budget also includes $3 million for an advanced driver simulator, which is being jointly developed by the Federal Highway Administration and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Beginning in 1991, the budget provides $2.0 million for a demonstration highway use tax evasion project to improve collection of Federal highway use taxes, especially the diesel fuel excise tax. The budget also proposes to consolidate the activities of the Highway Safety Research and Development program within this account.

Highway programs.—Provides engineering guidance to Federal and State agencies and to foreign governments, and conducts a program to encourage use of modern traffic engineering procedures to increase the vehicle-carrying capacity of existing highways and urban streets; assists States, other Federal agencies, and certain foreign countries in right-of-way acquisition and develops procedures for highway location selection and consideration of environmental impacts; and finances construction skill training programs for disadvantaged workers hired by contractors on federally aided highway projects.

Field operations.—Provides staff advisory and support services in field offices of the Federal Highway Administration; and provides program and engineering supervision through 9 regional and 52 division offices.

Beginning in 1991, this program is proposed for incorporation within the Research, Development, and Technology program funded within the Limitation on General Operating Expenses. The consolidation reflects the fact that both programs are authorized to carry out the basic highway-related research objectives set forth in 23 U.S.C. section 307, and would allow both highway research and highway safety research programs to be financed by a drawdown from Federal-Aid Highways authority.

The Motor Carrier Safety Grant program, authorized by the 1982 Surface Transportation Assistance Act, provides grants to States to enforce Federal and compatible State standards applicable to commercial motor vehicle safety. States become eligible for funds by adopting Federal truck safety standards and maintaining minimum levels of program funding. Uniform safety standards both enhance the coordination of enforcement activities and simplify the safety requirements of interstate trucking parties.

Federal grants for enforcement of commercial motor vehicle safety standards may not be used to maintain efforts already undertaken by State governments. The purpose of the grant

This fund is used to make cash advances to States for the purpose of purchasing right-of-way parcels in advance of highway construction and thereby preventing the inflation of land prices from significantly increasing construction costs.

States are required to reimburse the fund within ten years from the advance. In 1991, gross obligations will be limited to $47.85 million.

Note.—General fund outlays were decreased by $24 million in 1989 to correct an accounting error in 1988 reports to Treasury.

Programs funded under the Operations and Research appropriation are described below. Funding levels vary between program activities to reflect current priorities.

Rulemaking programs.—Covers rulemaking activity related to the promulgation of Federal motor vehicle safety standards for new and used motor vehicles, tires, and equipment; international harmonization of standards; vehicle fuel economy regulations; theft prevention; regulatory reform; and information on motor vehicle safety required by the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act. To strengthen the rulemaking program, two additional positions are requested in 1991.

Enforcement programs.—Provides for the enforcement of programs described under the rulemaking activity, including manufacturer compliance with motor vehicle safety and automotive fuel economy standards, investigation of safety-related motor vehicle defects, and surveillance of odometer tampering.

Highway safety programs.—Provides for technical assistance to States in the conduct of their highway safety programs; demonstration programs emphasizing alcohol and drug countermeasures, safety belt and child safety seat usage, automatic protection, improved traffic law enforcement, emergency medical services, and enhanced traffic records systems to reduce highway fatalities and injuries; and operation and improvement of the national driver register.

In addition, the budget proposes to expand a program to train law enforcement officials on how to detect drivers under the influence of drugs into an additional 40 metropolitan areas.

In an effort to reduce the extent of drunk driving, the budget also proposes to double the 1990 funding level for grants to States under the Drunk Driving Prevention Program (23 U.S.C. 410), which was established in the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988. This will result in a 1991 funding level of $8 million. These funds will be available to States that adopt and implement comprehensive drunk driving prevention programs which are self-sustaining and include measures that will improve enforcement of State drunk driving laws.

Research and analysis.—Provides motor vehicle safety and highway safety research and development in support of all NHTSA programs, including the collection and analysis of data to identify safety problems, develop alternative solutions, and assess costs, benefits, and effectiveness. Research will continue to concentrate on improving vehicle crashworthiness, accident avoidance characteristics of cars, trucks and motorcycles, safety belt usage and alcohol countermeasures. The budget includes funds to continue a national accident data collection program to improve problem identification, regulatory reform, and program evaluation activities. Continued funding in 1991 for the development of an advanced driver simulator is included in the budget of the Federal Highway Administration consistent with the joint NHTSA/FHWA responsibility for this project.

Safety formula grants.—Grant allocations are determined on the basis of a statutory formula established under 23 U.S.C. 402. Individual States use this funding in areas which have the greatest potential for achieving safety improvements and reducing traffic crashes and fatalities. Activities are centered predominantly on efforts to control drivers impaired by alcohol and other drugs; stimulate activities to improve occupant protection; improve traffic law enforcement; improve the quality of emergency medical services; improve motorcycle safety; improve the collection and analysis of traffic accident data; and establish and maintain a computerized traffic recordkeeping system.

Alcohol safety incentive grants.—Grant allocations will be made under 23 U.S.C. 408, to those States which adopt and implement effective programs to reduce traffic safety problems resulting from persons driving while under the influence of alcohol.

The 1991 budget includes funds for an additional 47 staff years, including 12 trainee positions to enhance the management and enforcement of new regulations mandated by the Rail Safety Improvement Act of 1988. Beginning in 1991, the Department is proposing to establish a user fee for the railroad safety program.

Federal enforcement.—This program provides salaries and related expenses for safety field operations and is designed to reduce the number of railroad related accidents/incidents.

Federal inspectors monitor railroads for compliance with Federal laws with specific emphasis on passenger and hazardous material routes. In addition, this staff provides training to Federal, State and railroad industry personnel on related safety enforcement activities, including programs dealing with the problem of alcohol and drug abuse.

Automated track inspection program.—This program provides funds for the continued operation by FRA's Office of Safety of a self-propelled automatic track inspection vehicle. The track inspection vehicle will survey approximately 28,000 miles of track in 1991.

Safety regulation and program administration.—This program funds the salaries and related expenses of safety headquarters personnel, data gathering and dissemination, and planning and evaluation activities; issues new or revised standards, procedures, and regulations to provide a safer railroad environment; and administers post-accident and random testing of railroad employees, technical training and management of rail-highway grade crossings.

Note.—In 1990, the Office of the Administrator appropriation included $500 thousand for grants to evaluate high-speed rail projects and for FRA to assess the safety of magnetic levitation systems.

The 1991 budget provides funds for the conduct of railroad research and development, including the salaries and related expenses of the research management staff. The research conducted encompasses all aspects of existing and anticipated railroad operations and maintenance relating to railroad safety and advanced technology.

Equipment, operations, and hazardous materials safety.—This program focuses on the safety and performance of equipment, components, operating practices, and hazardous materials transport in the railroad environment.

Track safety.—This program focuses on the safety and performance of track structures including critical components, railroad bridge structures, signal and train control systems, and other elements of the railroad right of way that influence train operations. It also encompasses research on the interaction between trains and the track structure.

Magnetic levitation and high speed rail technology.—This program focuses on the safety and performance characteristics of very high speed rail and magnetic levitation (maglev) transportation systems. The 1991 research activities will pick up on earlier maglev research that was suspended in the mid-seventies by incorporating technological advances made worldwide since then. Emphasis will be on determination of the viability of "next generation" maglev systems and the potential for implementation of maglev systems by the U.S. private sector, given some stimulus from the Federal Government, and on the establishment of a sound technical basis for the development of the initial national safety standard for maglev transportation systems.

Environmental law compliance (facilities).—This program includes those activities necessary to bring Federal Railroad Administration research and development facilities into compliance with Federal and State environmental laws.

In 1981, the Government began valuation settlements with railroads for properties transferred to Conrail in 1976. Total settlements made amount to $2.8 billion.

This appropriation would repay borrowings from the Department of the Treasury. The borrowings paid for the properties of the Penn Central Transportation Company and their subsidiaries and affiliates transferred to Conrail in 1976. Because Treasury lends these funds at the current interest rate, the request also includes an appropriation to cover interest that is accruing each day until the notes are repaid.

Amtrak has made significant progress over the last several years in increasing its revenue-to-cost ratio. Amtrak's objective is to eliminate the need for Federal operating subsidies by the year 2000. However, current budget constraints limit the availability of funds for Amtrak's present subsidy needs. Accordingly, no Federal subsidy is proposed for 1991. The Administration is eager to work with Congress, Amtrak, and

The United States Railway Association was authorized by the Regional Rail Reorganization Act, as amended, to borrow funds and make loans to certain railroads. These borrowings were guaranteed by the Secretary of Transportation and are limited to an aggregate of outstanding obligations of $395 million. Outstanding loans payable were transferred to the Department of Transportation on January 1, 1987. In 1990, an appropriation to liquidate $95 million of principal and $9,577 thousand in accrued interest was enacted. Due to the 1990 drug program offset, the 1990 appropriation was reduced by $285 thousand. In order to close out this account, an appropriation to liquidate principal plus interest is requested in 1991.

Redeemable preference shares.—Authority for the section 505 redeemable preference shares program expired on September 30, 1988, and no new commitments will be made in the section 511 loan guarantee program in 1990 and 1991. However, outlays will continue on section 505 projects included in prior year appropriations. This account now reflects direct loans which were previously shown under the Federal Financing Bank direct loan account. The account also reflects receipts of $92.6 million for principal and interest in 1989, $137 million in 1990, and $18 million in 1991 resulting from the sale of redeemable preference shares to the private sector.

Loan repayments.—This program reflects repayments of principal and interest on outstanding borrowings by the railroads to the Federal Financing Bank.

URBAN MASS TRANSPORTATION ADMINISTRATION

This budget proposes a Federal commitment of $2.56 billion in new budgetary resources for mass transit capital, operating subsidies, planning, and technical assistance, consistent with the framework established by the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Act of 1987. It also assists transit authorities in addressing Federal requirements to improve air quality and to increase mass transit accessibility for disabled individuals.

The development of the 1991 budget, within the constraints imposed by the need to reduce the Federal deficit, is based on the need to focus Federal transit assistance on maintaining the capital infrastructure of local public transportation, rather than provide operating assistance. Locally determined investments to maintain existing infrastructure are generally the most cost-beneficial use of limited Federal transit funds.

The Administration proposes to provide significantly less emphasis on assisting localities with the operating costs, which result from local fare and service policies. Federal operating assistance for the 30 largest urbanized areas with populations above one million, accounting for less than 6 percent of operating budgets for the affected areas, would be eliminated by the Administration's proposal.

Finally, the budget propoees to limit Federal spending on new Starts to those projects for which the Government has signed full funding contracts. This reduced Federal role will require greater State, local, and private sector interest in financing major new capital projects. The following tables depict budget authority and program levels for all urban mass transportation programs. More detail is furnished in the budget schedules:

Through 1990, this appropriation provides funding for substitute transit projects while funding for substitute highway projects is included in the budget of the Federal Highway Administration. Beginning in 1991, no funding is requested under this account. Eligible substitute transit project commitments will be funded through the Interstate substitution program under the Federal-Aid Highways Account (Trust Fund), administered by the Federal Highway Administration.

The National Capital Transportation Amendments of 1979 authorized $1.7 billion in Federal funds to support the construction of Washington Metrorail system. Through 1990, $1,592 million has been appropriated, leaving a balance of $108 million. An appropriation of $38 million is requested for management, consultants, and start-up costs associated with construction on the 89.5 mile system. The proposed funding level is consistent with the Federal commitment under the 1986 full funding agreement. Through 1991, including this request, the Federal Government will have made available a total of $7.61 billion for the Washington Metrorail system, far more resources than for the construction of any other new mass transit system.

This program provides block grants, by statutory formula, to State and local agencies for mass transportation capital and operating expenses.

The Administration proposes to eliminate operating assistance for urbanized areas of more than one million persons since these areas are far less dependent on federal assistance than are the smaller cities. Federal operating subsidies for areas over one million persons averages less than 6 percent of their total operating budgets.

The 1991 appropriation request of $1.077 billion includes: $709 million for capital grants, $65 million for nonurban areas under Section 18, $5 million for the Rural Transit Assistance Program (RTAP), and $298 million for operating assistance to cities with populations of one million persons or less.

The discretionary grants program is used to fund selected bus projects, rail modernization projects, and new subway and light rail systems. In addition, a small amount of discretionary funds is used to support planning, innovative techniques, and special elderly and handicapped transportation services. Together with formula grants, funds are available in 1991 to help transit authorities address requirements to improve air quality and increase access to transit services for disabled individuals.

The 1991 budget proposes $985 million for discretionary capital grants to be allocated as follows: $193 million for bus projects, $394 million for rail modernization and $398 million for new starts. Since the mass transit reauthorization ends in 1991, new starts funding is only proposed for projects with full funding contracts and with funding requirements which can be accommodated in 1991 with available funds. Funding for other new rail systems should be addressed within the context of the 1992 reauthorization. The 1991 budget also proposes $45 million for Planning, $35 million for Elderly and Handicapped and $5 million for Transportation Centers.

The primary purpose of this account is to operate and maintain a safe and efficient national aviation system. This account finances the personnel and support costs of operating and maintaining the air traffic control system and ensuring the safety and security of aircraft, flight procedures, navigation aids, and airports through periodic inspections. It also supports overall policy direction and guidance.

For 1991, the budget proposes growth in the FAA workforce to meet increasing demands. Specifically, the budget requests an employment level of 17,495 for the air traffic controller workforce, an increase of 495 over the estimated 1990 level; 3,058 aviation safety inspector positions, an increase of 300 over 1990; 848 civil aviation security positions, an increase of 164 over 1990; and 9,539 field maintenance positions, an increase of 260 over 1990. These increases will allow the FAA to keep pace with the expected increases in air traffic activity and to augment its safety enforcement and security efforts. The budget continues emphasis on upgrading training programs and thereby increasing the qualifications and proficiencies of the FAA workforce.

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (26 U.S.C. 9502), as amended by Title IV of the Airport and Airway Safety and Capacity Expansion Act of 1987 (P.L. 100–223), provides for the receipts received in the Treasury from the 8 percent passenger ticket tax and certain other taxes paid by airport and airway users to be transferred from the general fund of the Treasury to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund. In turn, appropriations are authorized from this fund to meet obligations for airport improvement grants, facilities and equipment, research, and a portion of operations.

The status of the fund is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Uncommitted cash balance, end of year	6,869,515	7,623,816	6,389,542

At the end of 1990, the uncommitted Trust Fund balance is estimated to be $7.6 billion. This balance has accumulated because a penalty provision in the 1982 and 1987 authorization acts caused the share of FAA operations appropriations financed from the trust fund to be $6.6 billion lower than authorized. This shortfall was subsidized by the general taxpayer through the use of general fund appropriations. Interest of about $2.1 billion has accrued to the trust fund based on the $6.6 billion unused for operations. The total of the unused funds and the interest ($8.7 billion) will exceed the uncommitted balance at the end of 1990.

The authorization for FAA Research, Engineering and Development and Facilities and Equipment programs expires October 1, 1990. Also, user taxes, which support the trust fund, expire at the end of 1990.

The proposed reauthorization legislation accompanying the 1991 budget provides for an increase in the passenger ticket tax from 8 to 10 percent, with proportionate increases in other taxes, and is consistent with cost allocation studies by the FAA, that 85 percent of FAA's budget be financed from the trust fund.

Note.—Line 00.05 has an estimated contingent liability of $54 million (present value) associated with the FAA's long-term lease of facilities at the Mike Monroney Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. This contingent liability will be funded through this account.

The proposed funding supports the FAA plan to modernize and improve the national airspace system. In particular, funds would provide for significant progress in implementing the advanced automation system, designed to upgrade air traffic control technology; the voice switching and control system, to modernize the system's outdated communications network; terminal doppler weather radar, to improve hazardous weather detection in terminal areas; and long range radar, to replace obsolete navigational radars at FAA/Department of Defense facilities. The budget also includes funds for an additonal 375 positions needed to implement NAS plan equipment.

The budget also sustains the current infrastructure by funding projects needed to keep today's systems operating until the late 1990s. These include the interim support plan, which will overhaul outdated air traffic control computers and radars, the consolidation and expansion of radar approach control facilities for all of southern California, and the replacement of obsolete radio control equipment at control towers. The budget would also provide for capacity-enhancing airport facilities at Dallas/Ft. Worth and Denver, which will improve traffic flow throughout the national system.

The FAA conducts research, engineering and development programs to improve the national air traffic control system by increasing its safety, security, productivity and capacity to meet the expected air traffic demands of the future. The agency also administers aviation medical research aimed at increasing the personal effectiveness and safety of air traffic controllers and the safety of aircrew members.

These programs are conducted by the agency's technical personnel and through contracts with qualified private firms, universities, individuals and other Government agencies. The 1991 request will support a variety of essential aviation-related research efforts, including research into human factors, security, aging aircraft, and capacity improvements.

The Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982, as amended by the Airport and Airway Safety and Capacity Expansion Act of 1987, authorizes use of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund as the source of financing a portion of FAA's operating costs. Cost allocation studies by the FAA show that, overall, 85 percent of the cost of the FAA's programs is attributable to the users contributing to the trust fund. For 1991, it is proposed that $2,846,000,000 of the Operations appropriation be financed from the trust fund to provide an overall 85 percent cost recovery. This means that the trust fund will help pay for the salaries and related expenses of FAA's critical safety employees who have the daily responsibility of ensuring the safety of the flying public.

COAST GUARD

The following table depicts funding for all Coast Guard programs for which detail is furnished in the budget schedules, including net transfers, enacted supplementals, and proposed legislation. Other proposals for 1991, not reflected below, would establish users fees of $200 million on selected Coast Guard services.

Funds for operating expenses represent more than two-thirds of the total Coast Guard program level. To carry out its unique duties as a peacetime operating agency and one of the military services, the Coast Guard employs multipurpose vessels, aircraft, and shore units, strategically located along the coasts and inland waterways of the United States and in selected areas overseas. In 1991, the search and rescue, enforcement of laws and treaties, and aids to navigation programs will continue to account for the major portion of the budget. The 1991 request reflects a continued drug interdiction emphasis, while at the same time an increased effort to protect the environment.

The request includes $140 million in lieu of "services-in-kind" to the Coast Guard for services and supplies funded in 1990 by the Department of Defense.

NOTES

The amount in 1990 for budget authority transferred from Operating Expenses, set by the appropriation language above, was reduced by P.L. 99–177.

Excludes $7,000 thousand in budget authority in 1991 for activities transferred to Coast Guard environmental compliance and restoration. Comparable amounts for 1989 ($4,000 thousand) and 1990 ($2,891 thousand) are included above.

The Acquisition, Construction, and Improvements (AC&I) appropriation provides for the major acquisition, construction, and improvement of vessels, aircraft, information management resources, shore units, and aids-to-navigation. AC&I projects are those in which estimated costs are $200 thousand or more and in which the project involves either new construction or renewal of at least 75 percent of the original facility. Most of the facilities financed by this appropriation are multi-mission in nature and are required by the Coast Guard in the performance of its operational and regulatory missions.

Vessels.—During 1991, funding is requested to continue the major renovation of the 378-foot high endurance cutters, and continue the renovation of the 210-foot medium endurance cutters, and the 180-foot oceangoing buoy tenders. These programs enhance Coast Guard's critical multimission capabilities by improving overall readiness and maintenance posture.

Aircraft.—During 1991, continuing progress will be made in acquiring replacement aircraft and aircraft sensors to enhance search and rescue and law enforcement missions. Funds to replace medium range law enforcement helicopters operating in the waters of the southeastern U.S. are requested. Improvements to the HH-65 helicopter will continue. Acquisition of the TALON System for helicopters landing aboard ship will be continued.

Shore Facilities.—In 1991, procurement of shore facility projects will include new construction, renovations, improvements, and replacements of existing facilities. These projects range from Search and Rescue station rehabilitations and moorings improvements to a service-wide program to improve Coast Guard housing units.

This appropriation provides the Government's share of the costs for altering or removing bridges determined to be obstructions to navigation. Generally, bridges to be altered were built with what are now insufficient vertical and/or horizontal clearances for free navigation on navigable waters of the United States. In 1991, $6.4 million is requested to continue alteration of the Norfolk Southern Railroad bridge over the Mississippi River, Hannibal, Missouri and for alteration of the CSX Railroad bridge over the Pascagoula River, Pascagoula, Mississippi. The request for 1991 also includes funds to begin alterations on the Burlington Northern Railroad bridge over the Mississippi River at Burlington, Iowa.

The Coast Guard Reserve Forces provide qualified individuals and trained units for active duty in event of conflict, national emergency, or natural and man-made disasters. The Reservists maintain their readiness through realistic, coordinated mobilization exercises, formal military training and duty along side regular Coast Guard personnel during routine and emergency operations. The 1990 Selected Reserve program level will be expanded from a funded strength of 12,050 to 12,700 in FY 1991.

This fund insures immediate cleanup of oil or other hazardous polluting substances spilled into the navigable waters of the United States, adjoining shorelines or waters of the contiguous zone. The fund is used when a spill occurs and the responsible owners or operators of a vessel, onshore facility, or offshore facility do not accomplish immediate cleanup with their own resources. Expenditures from the fund are later reimbursed by the responsible owners or operators.

The Deepwater Port Act of 1974 provided a system for determination and settlement of claims for all cleanup costs and damages incurred as a result of discharges of oil into the marine environment from deepwater port activities. The Deepwater Port Act Amendments of 1984 suspended the two-cent-per barrel fee to be assessed against all oil delivered at deepwater ports and to be deposited in this fund. The collection of this fee may not resume unless the fund balance falls below $4,000,000. Additional funds are not requested for 1991.

MARITIME ADMINISTRATION

The Maritime Administration is responsible for programs authorized by the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, and other related acts, to promote a strong U.S. Merchant Marine. Emphasis is placed on increasing the competitiveness and productivity of the U.S. maritime industries as well as ensuring adequate seafaring manpower for peacetime and national emergencies. Programs include: providing subsidy aid for operation of U.S.-flag operators; the administration of the Federal Ship Financing Fund loan portfolio; reimbursing the Commodity Credit Corporation for the expanded cargo preference requirement in the Food Security Act of 1985; the preservation and maintenance of merchant ships retained in the National Defense Reserve Fleet including the Ready Reserve Force; emergency planning and coordination; and conducting Federal technology assessment projects.

The following table shows the funding for the Maritime Administration programs:

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, provides for operating subsidies to be paid to qualified operators of U.S.-flag vessels. The 1991 request provides funds for current operations under existing operating-differential subsidy contracts. The budget reflects no new contract authority on the basis that the obligations under the existing contracts were incurred when the contracts were signed.

Public Law 99-198 amended section 901 of the Merchant Marine Act to increase from 50 to 75 percent the amount of agricultural commodities under specified programs that must be carried on U.S.-flag vessels. The increased cost associated with this expanded U.S.-flag shipping requirement stems from higher rates charged by U.S.-flag carriers compared with foreign-flag carriers. The Maritime Administration is required to reimburse the Department of Agriculture for ocean freight differential costs for the added tonnage above 50 percent. These reimbursements are funded through borrowings from the Treasury. This account has a permanent, indefinite appropriation to liquidate debt provided in Public Law 100-202 to cover these costs.

In 1991, a program for sharing training vessels among the State schools is proposed.

This appropriation provides funding for the Ready Reserve Force (RRF), which is comprised of Government-owned, U.S.-flag merchant ships laid up in the National Defense Reserve Fleet (NDRF). The RRF is maintained in an advanced state of readiness to meet surge shipping requirements during a national emergency. Funding for this program was transferred from Navy appropriations beginning in 1989.

The appropriation provides for vessel acquisition, RRF ship activations and deactivations required to test ship reactivation readiness, maintaining RRF ships in an advanced state of reactivation readiness and associated costs of berthing ships at dispersed locations, special programs in support of the RRF, and long-term capital improvements at the fleet sites.

Increased funding in 1991 will also provide for the resumption of the acquisition of ships for the RRF fleet. Growth of the RRF fleet is needed to avoid jeopardizing an already marginal ability to provide basic logistic support to our deployed forces during the initial surge period of an armed conflict. With this level of funding, MarAd will get back on track toward meeting with the Department of Defense requirement of attaining a 142 ship RRF fleet by 1994.

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, established the Federal ship financing fund to assist in the development of the U.S. merchant marine by guaranteeing construction loans and mortgages on U.S.-flag vessels built in the United States. No new commitments for loan guarantees are projected for 1991.

Administrative expenses incurred in the operation of the Federal ship financing fund are paid from income to the fund. In 1991 the estimate includes $100 million as a contingency against possible defaults. The fund receives income from insurance premiums on construction loans and mortgages, fees, and interest on mortgages held directly.

The Maritime Administration is authorized to reactivate, operate, deactivate, and charter merchant vessels. These operations are financed by the vessel operations revolving fund. In addition, the fund is available to finance the necessary expenses to protect, maintain, preserve, acquire, and use vessels involved in mortgage foreclosure or forfeiture proceedings instituted by the United States; and to process advances received from Federal agencies.

Funds are reimbursed to this fund for various DOD/Navy-sponsored activities, such as the operation of activated RRF vessels, installation of sealift enhancement features and other special projects. Expenses are principally financed by reimbursements from Federal agencies.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to deal in gold and foreign exchange and other instruments of credit and securities as deemed necessary, consistent with U.S. obligations in the International Monetary Fund (IMF), regarding orderly exchange arrangements. An Exchange Stabilization Fund, with a capital of $200 million, is authorized by law for this purpose (31 U.S.C. 5302). All earnings and interest accruing to this fund are available for the purposes thereof. Transactions in special drawing rights (SDR's) and U.S. holdings of SDR's are administered by the fund. U.S. drawings from the IMF are also advanced to the fund.

The principal sources of the fund's income have been profits on foreign exchange transactions, interest on foreign exchange swap transactions, and on investments held by the fund, including interest earned on fund holdings of U.S. Government securities.

The amounts reflected in the 1990 and 1991 estimates entail only projected net interest earnings on Exchange Stabilization Fund (ESF) assets. They are subject to considerable error, as the amount and composition of assets can change dramatically, as well as interest rates applied to investments. In addition, exchange rate fluctuations can cause the dollar value of income received on foreign currency and SDR investments to fluctuate. Moreover, estimates make no attempt to forecast valuation gains or losses on SDR holdings or realized gains or losses on foreign currency holdings. As required by Public Law 95-612, the fund no longer is used to meet the administrative expenses.

[1] Pursuant to the Special Drawing Rights Act of 1968, Special Drawing Rights (SDR) allocated to or otherwise acquired by the United States are resources of the Exchange Stabilization Fund (ESF). SDR, once allocated, are permanent resources unless cancelled (which requires an 85 percent majority decision of the total voting power of the Board of Governors of the International Monetary Fund), the Special Drawing Account is liquidated, the International Monetary Fund is liquidated, or the United States chooses to withdraw from the Fund or terminate its participation in the Special Drawing Account. Except for payment of interest and charges on SDR allocations to the United States, the payment of the Exchange Stabilization Fund liability related to SDR allocations is conditional on events listed above, in which the United States has a substantial or controlling voice. The Special Drawing Rights Act also authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue Special Drawing Rights certificates to the Federal Reserve Banks in return for dollar deposits in amounts equal to the value of the SDR held. The certificates may be issued to finance the acquisition of SDR from other countries or to provide resources for financing ESF operations.

Certain central services in the Department of the Treasury, including telecommunications, printing, reproduction, and printing procurement services, are provided on a reimbursable basis. Transactions are entered into with other Treasury appropriation accounts at rates which will recover the fund's operating expenses, including accrual of annual leave and depreciation of equipment. This presentation includes the Digital Telecommunications System, which is a Departmental initiative to modernize Treasury telecommunications through providing added voice communication capabilities and transmission networks for office automation and data communications; and the Consolidated Data Network, which is a Department-wide data communications system that will enhance security, offer lower cost data transmission and more reliable communication networks.

Debt proceeds are used to provide assistance to financially troubled Farm Credit System lending institutions. See description of the FAC in Part IV of this document.

The Energy Security Reserve was created principally to finance the activities of the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation. Public Law 99-190, making continuing appropriations for 1986, rescinded the balance of unobligated funds available to the Corporation. The Act left $10 million in the Reserve for the Corporation's liquidation and $400 million for a Clean Coal Technology Demonstration program, which has been transferred to a new account in the Department of Energy. The Act also transferred responsibility for ongoing projects of the Corporation to the Secretary of the Treasury; these projects' activities and financing will continue to be displayed in this account.

New Administrative Provisions in Fiscal Year 1989 for the Department of Energy allow the Department of Energy to retain in this account any funds brought into its Alcohol Fuels Loan Guarantee Program, either through sale of assets the Government has acquired through loan default and foreclosure, or repayments made on a loan for which the Department of Energy has become the direct lender by paying the guarantee on a defaulted loan. These retained funds will be held in a reserve against the possibility of further guaranteed loan defaults. The Department of Energy will also be able to use unobligated funds from its Alternative Fuels Production account to pay the guaranteed portion of defaults if the need arises, and if those funds are not needed by the Alternative Fuels Production program.

This fund is for use by the U.S. Treasury in making settlement with the payees or special endorsees in case of checks drawn on the U.S. Treasury which have been paid on forged endorsements.

To reduce hardships sustained by payees of Government checks that have been stolen and forged, settlement is made in advance of the receipt of funds from the endorsers of the checks through reclamation procedure by this office. Benefits from these early settlements are shared by claimants and the Government in that the claimants are more quickly restored financially to their proper position and the Government is spared the necessity of much unproductive correspondence. If the U.S. Treasury is unable to recover funds, the revolving account sustains the loss.

This revolving account is currently inactive and its unobligated balance is carried forward each fiscal year.

The Federal Financing Bank (FFB) was created to ensure the coordination of Federal and federally-assisted borrowing from the public and to ensure that such borrowings are financed in a manner least disruptive of private financial markets and institutions.

The Bank is the vehicle through which most Federal agencies finance their programs involving the sale or placement of credit market instruments, including agency securities, guaranteed obligations, participation agreements, and loan assets. The major exceptions are Title XI ship mortgage bonds and Government National Mortgage Association asset sales.

Transactions by the FFB on behalf of a Federal agency are treated as a means of financing the agency—i.e., lending by the FFB to the agency and borrowing by the agency from the FFB. These transactions are not reflected directly in the budget totals because borrowing and the repayment of borrowing between Federal agencies and the Treasury are not budgetary transactions. Rather, the budget authority and the outlays of the agency that are financed by such borrowing are reflected in particular agency accounts and, hence, in the budget totals.

Lending by the FFB to an agency may be accomplished in any of three forms (the form used depends on the authorizing statutes pertaining to a particular agency or program): (1) the FFB may purchase agency financial assets; (2) the FFB may originate direct loans on behalf of an agency; and (3) the FFB may acquire debt securities that the agency is otherwise authorized to issue to the public. In the case of FFB loan originations, the FFB actually disburses loans directly to private borrowers on behalf of the agency and receives repayments from the private borrower on behalf of the agency. However, consistent with the legal requirement that transactions by the FFB be treated as a means of financing agency obligations, the budget reflects the budgetary effect of those transactions, which, in succession, are a loan by the FFB to the agency, a loan by the agency to a private borrower, a repayment by a private borrower to the agency, and a repayment by the agency to the FFB.

In recent years, Congress has authorized certain Rural Electrification Administration-guaranteed borrowers and Department of Defense-guaranteed foreign military sales borrowers to prepay those loans at par, without the contractually required prepayment premiums. These prepayments result in losses to the FFB and thus the taxpayer.

Pursuant to these actions, the FFB has received REA-guaranteed borrower prepayments of $2.6 billion with associated losses of $0.6 billion. Another $0.5 billion in par prepayments is expected in 1990 and will lead to further losses.

To date, $7.2 billion of eligible FMS loans held by the FFB have been prepaid, with an associated taxpayer loss of $1.5 billion.

In the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1990, Congress expanded the Foreign Military Sales prepayment authority to include loans bearing interest rates no lower than 8 percent. While the amounts that FMS borrowers would choose to prepay under this legislation are subject to a variety of factors and cannot be estimated with precision, depending on market conditions, an additional $1.7 billion of FFB-held FMS debt could be expected to be prepaid, with an associated loss to the taxpayer of up to $150 million.

As a result of the losses sustained under the prepayment programs, the FFB had a negative net worth of $1.4 billion at the end of 1989.

The following table shows by agency and program the net lending by the FFB during each year and the amount of loans outstanding at the end of the year.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing designs, manufactures, and supplies Federal Reserve notes, various public debt instruments, as well as most evidences of a financial character issued by the United States, such as postage and internal revenue stamps. The Bureau executes certain printings for various territories administered by the United States, particularly postage and revenue stamps.

The anticipated work volume is based on estimates of requirements submitted by agencies served. The program comprises the following activities:

Engraving and printing—

Currency.—Total deliveries of currency for 1990 and 1991 are estimated to be 7.0 and 8.0 billion notes, respectively. During 1989 the Bureau delivered 6.3 billion Federal Reserve notes.

Stamps.—This category of work is comprised of postal and internal revenue stamps. The projected requirements for 1990 and 1991 are 36.3 and 39.5 billion stamps, respectively. In 1989, the Bureau delivered 32.4 billion stamps.

Securities.—This program encompasses the production of a wide variety of bonds, notes, and debentures for the Bureau of Public Debt and certain other agencies of the Government.

Commissions, certificates, etc.—This program is comprised primarily of Presidential and Department of Defense commissions and certificates, White House invitations, and identification cards for various Government agencies. It represents a small portion of the Bureau's total workload.

Space utilized by other agencies.—Other agencies are charged for services provided in the space occupied in the Bureau's buildings.

Other miscellaneous services.—A wide variety of miscellaneous services are performed by Bureau personnel for other agencies, which are charged on an actual cost basis.

Purchase of operating equipment.—This category consists of new purchases and replacement of printing equipment and other related printing items.

Plant alterations and experimental equipment.—This category encompasses alterations made on the Bureau's buildings and purchases of experimental equipment.

The operations of the Bureau are currently financed by means of a revolving fund established in accordance with the provisions of Public Law 656, August 4, 1950 (31 U.S.C. 181), which requires the Bureau to be reimbursed by customer agencies for all costs of manufacturing products and services performed. The Bureau is also authorized to assess amounts to acquire capital equipment and provide for working capital needs. Bureau operations during 1989 resulted in an increase to retained earnings of $21.2 million.

Legislation will be proposed to create a public enterprise fund, the Mint Revolving Fund, to finance numismatic and bullion coin operations for the United States Mint beginning with 1991.

The Mint would retain profits from 1990 reimbursable programs to support start-up operations at October 1, 1990. During 1991 and thereafter, sales proceeds would be deposited into the revolving fund and operating and capital expenditures would be charged against the fund. At year's end, numismatic and bullion program net profits would be deposited into the General Fund of the Treasury, with the exception of a stated amount of funding to be retained to finance start-up operations for the subsequent fiscal year.

The Mint would be required to submit business-type statements to the Congress in support of the operations of the revolving fund.
